AUNT BETTY'S CHILI COOK OFF ONCE AGAIN RAISES FUNDS FOR THE COMMUNITY WHILE BURNING THE TONGUES OF DOZENS

There are few regular events held in the Las Vegas LGBT community that attract as much attention as the annual Aunt Betty spectacular. I refer to the 4th Annual Chili Cook-Off. Jack and Bob of Spotlight Lounge are there supporting Aunt Betty as she struts her stuff for the benefit of the community on Sunday, July 31 at 4 p.m.

The Chili Cook-Off has taken on a competitive edge with people ever more determined to have their chili judged in a public forum. The event is becoming a serious bone of contention as the assembled chefs anxiously look for mere approval then hope against hope that they may actually steal a title.

This year there are two new categories: Best Cornbread and Worst Chili. Cornbread is an essential accompaniment to a good bowl of chili, so this year Aunt Betty is going to recognize this fact by giving cornbread its own category. The Worst Chili category is a bit of fun and is designed as a public service, warning people that if the winner ever invites you home for a bowl of chili, you will know better.

Bella Da Ball is going to be on hand to keep things in good humor. Moreover, she will launch the first Annual Bella Da Ball Alpo Chili award.

Aunt Betty (Empress VI) and Bella Da Ball (Empress III) have turned this event into a Las Vegas landmark in the last few years. All the money raised is intended for local food pantries and Golden Rainbow.

This is not an event where the judges are the only ones to enjoy the food. You too can follow the judges and make your own decisions about whose chili was best. All that Aunt Betty asks is that you recognize the fund-raising purpose of the event and make an appropriate donation.

There are three basic categories: Hot, Medium and Mild. There are three prizes awarded in each category. Everyone gets to eat, Bella makes money with her persuasive auctioneering style and a good time is had by all. What better way to spend a Sunday afternoon?

Jack and Bob can't wait to welcome you to the Spotlight Lounge. The staff of Out Las Vegas will be there (Hello! With all that wonderful chili, I should think so). See you there. ▼

By Homer Marrs

Last month I moved into a new apartment. With me I brought some baggage.

Dana was a friend of mine in high school. She was a bad-ass, and I was a nerd, but by senior year all the crowds were mixing and somehow we both wound up popular. She thought I was hilarious, and I thought the same of her, and since she was tough as nails I always wanted her approval. Until, one day, I didn't want her anything.

Our friendship continued through college, though we were 1,500 miles apart. At this distance we found it very easy to like each other. Our e-mails were hysterical; our get-togethers, pure comedy. They were also limited to just a few hang-outs at Christmas and maybe one over the summer. And typically these were buffered with the company of two other people we really liked, one of whom is still my dearest friend.

Something about being away from someone really helps you complete a false puzzle of her in your mind from the few genuine pieces you've been given. That is to say I found it easy to ignore the fact that Dana made me uncomfortable when she wasn't making me laugh. I knew she was bossy, and quick to put up her dukes, but generally I avoided disagreeing with her and just went along with things when she was in a mood. My self-esteem was lower then.

I evicted Dana from my life the first year after college. The impetus was her behavior the last time she came to visit: she didn't do anything overtly mean, but throughout the weekend I felt a fundamental difference in the way we communicated was finally coming to a head. A big, fat head. I realized a friend was someone I needed to feel relaxed with, and too much of my energy was going towards keeping her cool. It had been that way all along.

Giving her the notice took a full year because I did it like a grown-up and a coward. I didn't know the etiquette of splitting with a friend, and I didn't have the guts to say "no more." I knew that bluntness would hurt her and I couldn't bear to do that. Instead I drew the hurt out over months of confusing vagueness. Phone calls became slower returned on my end, as did e-mails and birthday cards, etc. She made several attempts to take the blame for this distancing, but I only pushed it further. Eventually, it stopped.

The best gift Dana ever gave me was a sign that read "Fat Head Xing." Fashioned after street signs that warn drivers of deer and deaf children, it's a simple yellow diamond, about two-by-two feet, with black print and lettering. In the center is the figure of a man in motion whose dot-for-a-head is five times his size. She had it custom made for my twentieth birthday, when the funniest thing we could call each other was "fat head."

The sign came down when I pushed Dana away, but I never let it go. It had too much character to part with, and something inside me was in denial that I'd kicked her to the curb. To boot, my apartments during this time were small, and not every wall curio could fit. The home I've just moved into has a lot more canvass.

Hence I have chosen to hang the sign again. I think of Dana in a faint way nearly every time I see it, and I wonder if keeping it for show is somehow sick or makes me immoral. I know I did the right thing by ending our friendship, but did I lose my right to souvenirs in doing that? Does keeping the sign make me shallow? It all feels like an episode of Seinfeld, but one day I'll get it sorted out in my head.

My big, fat head. ▼

The Themes the Thing

The queer Pride season is upon us, and the question being asked in each city is, "What's YOUR Pride theme?"

Come again? When did Pride celebrations and parades all start coming out with a "theme?" Did we all watch too much Queer Eye and decide that like all good parties, a Pride celebration has to have a theme? This phenomenon completely slid under my radar screen. And yet, there they are.

High school English for me was back in the age of the dinosaurs, but I vaguely recall (as we read our stone tablets) that the "theme" was the message that the writer in question was trying to get across. In other words, the theme encapsulates the message. So is that the purpose of the Pride themes?

If suppose in the early years of Pride, we didn't used to have themes — because the theme of Pride was understood: survival and acceptance. Basically, every Pride march — before they evolved into the wonderful festivals and weekend celebrations we have now in many cities and towns — had the theme of "We're here, we're queer, get used to it!" Those were the heady, scary, exhilarating old days. Before we had gay marriage in Massachusetts and civil union in Vermont. And, on the down side, before we had Christian conservatives taking over statehouses and the White House.

These days, everyone basically knows that we're here, we're queer, and we're not going away. So now themes add the political message to parades that have become in many cases more celebrations of who we are (true pride) than demands for recognition and the right to live as the people we are. In other words, now the theme's the thing.

I did a quick Google search of pride themes in cities around the country and in Europe to learn more. As line after line popped up on my computer screen, I was stunned at how evocative the themes are. How about Boston: "Pride in Progress... What's Your Fight?" Or Los Angeles: "How Do You Wear Your Pride?" where the idea is to ask whether you are out and proud by putting a picture of your partner on your desk at work, by bringing your parents to the parade, or by wearing buttless chaps. Atlanta's theme: "Unite and Act" sounds stirring. Until you realize, "Wait a minute — where's the gay in that?" Taken out of context, it could apply equally well to a Screen Actors' Guild union rally — or an anti-gay Family Research Council rally.

New York City offers: "Equal Rights — No More No Less." Now that could apply to any civil rights issue, but it confronts the "special rights" claim of those on the other side head on. San Francisco's Pride theme this year is "Stand Up, Stand Out, Stand Proud." Just reading it makes you puff out your chest a little.

Even Paris, France, one of the most apolitical groups of queer folks you'll ever find, has a really strong theme this year: "Couples, Parenthood, Equality Now!" Mon dieu! Farther afield, little Leicester, England has a groovy 1960's theme: "Summer of Love — Peace, Passion, and Partnerships." Which immediately presents two things straight folks like to not imagine about us: hot blooded passion between members of the same sex and the commitment of same sex couples. Way to go, Leicester!

The most boring Pride theme I found is from our neighbors to the North. Toronto's theme this year is the not-too-rousing "25 Years and Counting." Whoo-hoo! Yawn. But then, they're Canadian, so what can you really expect? They're not exactly known for flair — at least, not the non-French ones.

After I looked at actual themes, I did an informal survey of what other folks might want to see as Pride themes. One person suggested "Gay Rights = Family Rights." Another offered the hard-to-fit-on-a-poster "Proud to Be Your Queer Brothers, Sisters, Neighbors." Yet another, not too seriously perhaps, suggested the slightly more tactile "Women Lovin' Women Is Finger Lickin' Good" and the more Village People-esque "Proudly Honoring Our Gay Men In Uniform." I liked — but Disney would not — a theme that you couldn't get out of your head: "It's a Small (Gay) World, After All." A Democrat friend liked "Lesbians Never Tire of Licking Bush." Another liked "Gay Bashing Is a Weapon of Mass Distraction." Or there was my favorite: "Mess With Us and We'll Dress You Funny."

It's probably a good thing that we think about Pride themes now. It means we've come a long way, baby. Because, thematically speaking, we now can say "Gay Marriage Rocks," and we're "Proud to Be... LGBT." ▼

peeping with tom

By Tom Moilanen

Ashton's Eleven? (It's not THAT big.)

Words of wisdom: Don't ever use a toilet brush as a plunger.

Given that my area of expertise lies in plumbing of another sort, I figured I would avert disaster if I just stuck something in the bowl and swooshed it around a bit. Wrong. The world hasn't seen a flood like this since the Old Testament. The only difference is that Noah was instructed to save his critters, whereas God would hardly be interested in preserving last night's corn, if you know what I mean.

So here I sit, tucked away in the cozy environs of my hometown in Northern Minnesota, knee-deep in the product of my own digestive tract. I'm staying with a friend, who, thankfully, will be at work for the next seven hours. That should provide ample time for me to finish with this crap. It should also provide ample time for me to clean the bathroom.

Seeing as though I'm on vacation with a deadline fast approaching, I won't be able to cough up my usual coverage of two new flicks. Stuff keeps rolling off the assembly line, but unfortunately I'm not in a position to watch it. I can, however, give you the low-down on the debut of an emerging company called EON Films and its contribution to the comeback of superstar Ashton Ryan.

"Didn't you recently donate three columns to Ashton via interviews and chronologies?" you ask. "Didn't he just do an autograph signing at your store?" you query. "Isn't that an example of shameless self-promotion and a blatant attempt at a mutual stroke job?" you ponder. Hell yes. Did you think we're in this business because we care about your masturbatory fantasies? Are you naive enough to believe we're in the game to provide some sort of twisted version of community service? This is about the almighty buck. So are Pride festivals, parades, AIDS walks and bachelor auctions. They're called "fundraisers" for a reason, you know.

Therefore, consider your consumption of Ashton's Eleven to be a contribution to the Ryan/Moilanen Foundation, with 0% going back into the community and 100% going toward my new Cadillac.

The title is, obviously, a nod to the classic

Vegas spy thriller Ocean's Eleven. (Ashton once told me, "Ashton's eleven? It's not that big.") The movie follows a similar pattern, what with the location footage, bank heist, and no-honor-among-thieves betrayal motif. It has all the makings of a satire with one missing key element: an over-the-top exaggeration of unique characteristics.

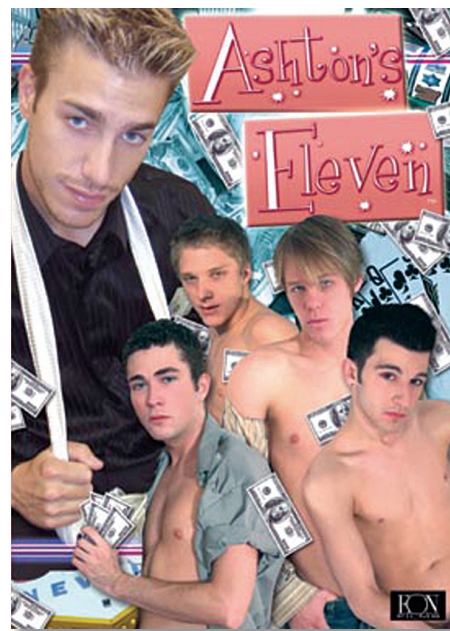

Granted, this is porn, not parody. However, given the wry humor of director Rocky Brown and the cheekiness of the concept, I would've been squirming in my skivvies had he gone one step further and made this a full-blown spoof. Consider the old straight porn flicks of the 1970's: Marilyn Chambers, Ron Jeremy, Seka, and that band of merry pranksters used to dish up sex with a smile and a nudge (as opposed to my dates, who dish about sex with a guffaw and a grudge).

So how's the rest of the flick?

Darn good, if not great. At age 25, Ashton still maintains his twinkish charm. He is slim, toned, smooth, and youthful, with all the unencumbered inhibitions of his earlier work. His delivery of non-sexual dialogue has improved dramatically (so to speak) compared to his narration in previous movies such as The American Way. His delivery of the sexual script needn't improve, as he's always been an on-camera dynamo.

He and Shane Stone rock hard in the opener. Chad Phoenix rises to the occasion midway through the flick and takes it like a man. Our hero appears one last time in the closing orgy scene, which was shot at some fancy-schmancy house right here in good old L.V. (Orgies are often a difficult shoot in that they wind up looking like a mish-mash of flesh. This one offers the perfect juxtaposition of group shots and duo/threesome close-ups in a testament to Brown's keen eye for the finished product.)

Of particular interest is the second scene with Jeremy Kirk and supertwink Tyler Mason. Rarely do you catch this type of sexual chemistry anywhere, much less on camera (and certainly not in my bedroom). There is an obvious attraction between these two that results in a sweat-soaked Kirk and an exhausted Mason, who, like the energizer bunny, takes a licking and keeps on ticking. Or is that pricking? How about dicking? In any event, Kirk hammers the bejeezus out of Mason to the point where I couldn't walk for a week. Now that's what I call a screw job.

Rounding out this five-scene barnburner is a threesome featuring Phoenix, Mason and Noah Jordan. (I've always thought Jerry Vale should've named his kid Noah, but alas, it was not to be.) This is also a pivotal point in the story, as it contains the appropriate penultimate moments (that would be the literary version of precum, for all you cultural cretins that comprise my readership). Like the rest of the movie, it sizzles with spunk (as opposed to my love life, which fizzles with funk).

For the full effect, you must stick around for the metaphoric post-coital cigarette and watch the ending. It actually makes the whole thing work and ties together the story in a shockingly novel surprise. Is Ashton a hero or a villain? Does he fit within the system, or is he a recklessly randy renegade? If you want to know the answers to these and other pressing questions, you ought to keep your hands off the remote until the gig is up and the final credits are rolling.

Speaking of gigs, all you gotta do is change a vowel and you have "gags," which is what my host is going to do if I don't schlep my sorry ass into his bathroom and begin the fumigation process. Disgusting? Yes. However, consider yourself honored. At least I put you in front of my behind.

I guess that would make me an aggressive bottom. Analogically speaking, of course. ▼

horoscopes

By Rev. Bill Morin

Cancer

(June 22-July 22)

You move at light speed on July 18 & 19. A soft sell works best on the 23rd. A series of small victories inspires you on the 30th. August 5 finds you in the spotlight (don't avoid it). Don't overdo the toy spending on the 9th. Avoid "burnout" on the 13th by staying at home.

Leo

(July 23-August 22)

That game plan should be in place by July 20. Sun's shift to your sign on the 22nd brings a sense of empowerment. You'll be able to charm the pants off all competitors on August 7. Expanding that financial portfolio on the 11th just makes sense. Passions run high on the 14th.

Aquarius

(January 20-February 18)

Travel plans for July 15 to 17 go smoothly. Sun's shift to Leo on the 23rd energizes your creative side, but messes with sleep patterns. August begins like a relay race. Just do your best, pass that baton and keep moving. A subtle approach brings victory on the 11th.

Virgo

(August 23-September 22)

Getting your ideas sold takes lots of effort on July 17. You must play by all the rules in career matters on the 24th. That significant other may be a bit pig headed on August 2. Keep that temper in check on the 6th. Make a special effort to help a friend in need on the 10th.

Pisces

(February 19-March 19)

Social gatherings take up much of your time from July 17-23. You'll be in great demand. Start planning that Fall getaway by the 31st. Avoid the advances of a charming but mysterious stranger on August 4. Your clientele base expands beautifully from the 7th-12th.

Libra

(September 23-October 22)

Higher ups view you quite favorably on July 18. A job change/promotion seems a lock by the 25th. Don't go looking for love on the 31st (let it find you). It's best to hide out & chill on August 5. Make amends with a former friend on the 10th. Dance your butt off on the 12th.

Aries

(March 20-April 19)

You start off this 30 day cycle like the tortoise, but end up sprinting to victory like the hare. Lend out no money between July 18 and 25. Walk away from that family feud on the 29th. A sweet real estate deal starts August off nicely. New Moon on the 6th could work your nerves.

Scorpio

(October 23-November 21)

Your energy cycle looks high from July 15-21. You can do no wrong during this time. However, from the 22nd-28th you'd be wise to stay on the sidelines & be invisible. Early August provides you with psychic abilities. The 8th brings about a unique investment opportunity.

Taurus

(April 20-May 20)

Small but steady gains head your way after July 19. Your reputation gets a major boost on the 22nd. Increase that advertising budget as of the 27th. A long distance road trip from August 4-10 ends on a very high note. Good financial news brings a smile to your face on the 13th.

Sagittarius

(November 22-December 21)

Additional income source as of July 16 floats your boat. Full Moon on the 21st makes you a romantic magnet. Avoid clashing with supervisors on the 30th. August 7 and 10 bring long overdue recognition. A friend who's new to the area bonds with you around the 14th.

Gemini

(May 21-June 21)

Keep your eyes (and heart) open on July 17, because love will be in the air. Energy levels may plummet on the 24th. Buttering up the boss on the 30th works best. Contracts & closings come off without a hitch on August 5. A happy yet overdue celebration takes place on the 11th.

Capricorn

(December 22-January 19)

Planetary aspects smile upon you most of this month. July 21 and 22 add punch to your powers of persuasion. You're dealt a financial winning hand on the 31st. Networking via out of town trip pays off handsomely from August 5-8. Make the 12th a retreat day.

Rev. Bill Morin has been a psychic since age 5. For a private consult, call 702-893-0611 or email him at Mccentaur35@aol.com. Catch Bill at Pride Factory Thursdays from 8 p.m. - Midnight.

IT'S BACK BABY!

Syphilis is back, and it's ready to party!

If you are a man who has sex with men, you may already have syphilis and not even know it. It usually shows up as a sore or rash.

- The only way to find out if you have syphilis is to get a blood test.
- The only way to get rid of it is to get medication.

Call now—759-0888—it's confidential and easy!
