Bug-Out!

Can You Believe It? OUT Las Vegas and The Bugle Are Together At Last!

Editorial

By Jere Keys, Editor

Above: The final issues of OUT Las Vegas and the Las Vegas Bugle as separate magazines. Below: Las Vegas Bugle publisher Rob Schlegel and OUT Las Vegas publisher Kelly McFarlane-Smith enjoying the Gay & Lesbian Community Center's 2002 Honorarium.

I know that I'm still in a bit of shock myself - OUT Las Vegas and the Las Vegas Bugle have finally joined forces. After over 3 years of competition, we've decided that the best way to better serve our community is together, instead of separately. As Dale Baylen put it, this is a total "Bug-Out."

Of course, the big question that everyone is asking: what are we to expect now?

Well, the OUT LAS VEGAS BUGLE will be published biweekly with an increased circulation. We'll be keeping your favorite writers and features from both magazines and rolling them together in one. But the real excitement comes from the new things we'll be able to provide.

You've probably already noticed that there have been some dramatic changes to the visual style of the magazine. What better time than now to start bringing a fresher, more contemporary look to the magazine that represents Gay Las Vegas.

People have said many things about the way gay people have a certain trend-setting and artistic aesthetic. In his book, The Snow Garden, gay author Christopher Rice comments "Beauty does fucked up things to gay people ... It's like this all-powerful wonder drug that erases that feeling of difference. These feminists and media studies people can take all their babble about body ideals and codes of aesthetics and shove it. We all know beauty when we see it. And when gay people see it they have to fight with everything they have to keep from heading straight for it and letting everything else fall away."

I agree with the spirit of the comment. Whether it's the perfect composition of a master painter, the haunting and timeless variations of a song, the sleek lines of architecture, or even the captivating and compelling soul of our partners, we do tend to seek out those things which are nearing perfection.

But don't worry that the OUT LAS VEGAS BUGLE will begin to neglect the things that made each of the previous magazines who they were. We'll continue to bring you the information you need to know about politics, the community based coverage of special events, and the best entertainment features we possibly can.

More than anything else, though, we want to hear from you! What do you want from your magazine? Are you more interested in national politics or the latest released gay-themed movie? Do you enjoy reading the community gossip articles or are you more interested in hearing about local community organizations? Have a comment, question or request - drop us a line!

I'd also like to make a disclaimer here about the use of language in the magazine. The OUT LAS VEGAS BUGLE is a magazine for and about gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, questioning and straight-allied people. But generally speaking, we'll probably shorten all that. Should we go with "homosexual"? No, it's not all-inclusive and sounds a little too medical, like the time when it was considered "a disease." Should we use that acronym GLBT (or its many variations - LGBT, GLBTQS-A, etc.)? Well, it is more inclusive, but sounds kind of like ordering a sandwich. Plus we get the fighting about which letter comes first. While I like and embrace the word "Queer," there are still a great many people out there who find the word offensive or uncomfortable. So, if we simply use "gay" in our stories, editorials, etc., it's not because we seek to be less than inclusive - it's because the word is simple, conveys the point, and is generally accepted by most people. It also has the value of brevity.

So welcome to the brand-new OUT LAS VEGAS BUGLE. Even though we bring a combined 27 years of experience to the project, I think of this magazine as a blank canvas to write the future of Gay Las Vegas upon. Please let us know what you think and how you would like to contribute to that canvas.

Please join me in congratulating both Kelly McFarlane-Smith and Rob Schlegel on their newfound friendship and business partnership. With two such dynamic and talented people as the publishers, I look forward to accomplishing many great things.

Jere Keys has been involved in the world of publishing for nearly 10 years now, having begun his career working for Chaparral High School's newspaper and literary magazine. He is a community activist who has been involved with organizations such as the Gay and Lesbian Community Center, Equal Rights Nevada and the Las Vegas Association of Pride, Inc. Letters to the editor, story suggestions and press releases may be sent to: OUT LAS VEGAS BUGLE, Attn: Jere Keys, Editor, 610 E. Sahara Ave., Ste. 13, Las Vegas, NV 89104, or can be sent by e-mail to editor@outlasvegas.com.

An ODD Couple?

OUT LAS VEGAS and
THE BUGLE Join Forces!

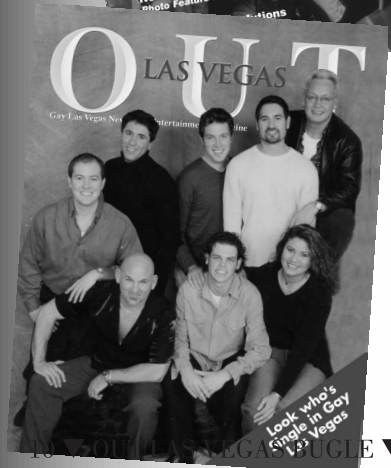

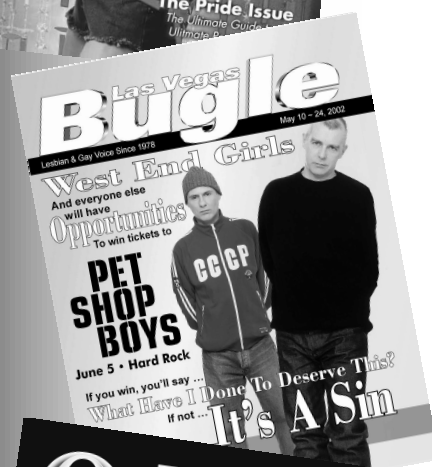

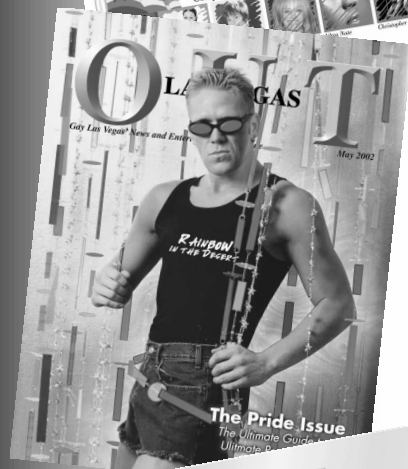

OUT Las Vegas and the Las Vegas BUGLE have merged into one publication, effective with this issue. The announcement of the merger, which had been kept “under wraps” for the past six weeks, was made by the newspapers’ respective publishers Kelly McFarlane Smith and Rob Schlegel, shortly after the agreement was signed on May 15.

The new publication, to be known as “OUT Las Vegas BUGLE”, will be merging the staffs and resources from the two newspapers with Smith and Schlegel being co-publishers. The new publication will be every two weeks, following the BUGLE’s print and production schedule. Prior to the merger, the BUGLE had been published every two weeks while OUT Las Vegas had been published monthly. Both publications had a distribution of 11,000 copies per issue. The merged newspaper will immediately see an increase in total copies printed and distributed.

“We decided it was best for the community and for our businesses to combine our resources and concentrate on giving the LGBT community a unified voice,” Schlegel said. "Once Rob and I sat down and talked," Smith explained, "We found we had more in common than we imagined. We also found that many of our previously, 'presumed disagreements' were simply that – 'presumed' – and our staffs were frequently working on the same businesses for increased advertising revenue."

Schlegel has published the Las Vegas BUGLE since 1987 when he purchased the Nevada Gay Times from the political group, Nevadans for Human Rights. The Nevada Gay Times was the successor to the Las Vegas Gay Times, founded in 1978. In 1988, the BUGLE acquired Reno's Stonewall Voice, combining the publications. In mid-1998, Schlegel sold the BUGLE to Brett McFarlane.

In 1999, McFarlane split off the classified and entertainment section of the BUGLE, which had become known as "OUT Las Vegas" and sold it to his sister, Kelly McFarlane Smith, who had been working with Brett on the BUGLE since he purchased it. McFarlane and Smith published a weekly newspaper, Sunday Times-Herald in North Las Vegas before acquiring the Bugle.

McFarlane published the BUGLE until early 2000 and he was instrumental in bringing about changes that are still seen in the BUGLE today. Schlegel returned as the BUGLE's publisher in April of 2000. The BUGLE and OUT have been competitors in the local LGBT market with the BUGLE being published by Just People Media, Inc. and OUT being published by Stonewall Publishing, Inc.

Just People Media's partners include Jesse Ramstetter, Steve Smith, Doug Adkins and Schlegel. Stonewall Publishing's partners include Kelly and Michael Smith. The new, combined publication, will be published under the Stonewall corporation.

"While it is a merger of two established newspapers," Schlegel said, "Our offices will eventually be housed at Stonewall's facility, located at 610 E. Sahara Ave., Suite 13. I will be keeping my office at 1140 Almond Tree Ln., Suite 304 during an interim period but will be moving to Stonewall over the next few weeks or month."

"Our telephones will be combined in the near future," said Smith, "and over the next few weeks we'll combine the web sites so whether your Internet browser goes to 'outlasvegas.com' or 'lvbugle.com', Internet users will get our combined site. Until then, both sites are operational and both phone numbers are being answered. Advertisers should send their payments to the address on their various invoices."

"Former Nevada State Senator Lori Lipman Brown, along with Vincent Frey, will continue to write for OUT Las Vegas BUGLE," said Schlegel, "although they will be on a rotating, every-other-issue basis. Rev. Charlie Arehart, pastor of the local Metropolitan Community Church and Ron Lawrence from Community Counseling Center, have agreed to continue with their frequent contributions. The combined newspaper will also feature Alison Bechtel and her 'Dykes to Watch Out For'. Auntee Social will continue on an every-other-issue basis and will be joined by OUT's 'Chastity' column on the alternating issues." Several new writers have been added to the pages in keeping with the new look. Rique Rose and Celina Quist will become regular columnist with each issue.

Jere Keys, editor of OUT Las Vegas will now edit the combined publication while Bill Schafer, former managing editor of the Las Vegas BUGLE will be pursuing other ventures. Schafer can still be contacted at the BUGLE's Almond Tree Lane office and will be staffing that office for the next few weeks.

"There has been speculation about whether our merger is a purchase of the BUGLE by OUT or if it is a merger of equals," stated Schlegel. "Stonewall will be the corporate name, but Kelly and I will be co-publishers. At some point over the next few years, it is possible that I will be going in a different direction and at some point, I may no longer be involved with OUT Las Vegas BUGLE. We have made a provision in our merger agreement that I can exit the company at some future point, if I desire, but if and when that happens, we will make an announcement."

"Perhaps the best part," laughed Smith, "has been the astonished looks and comments when people have seen Rob, Michael and I getting along so well over the past couple of months. When Michael and I both were sporting 'Las Vegas BUGLE' tattoos at the Pride Festival, people really started talking." "I would really be happy," Schlegel said, "If I had gotten the half million dollar – or even the quarter-million dollar - payment that I heard about in two separate rumors," said Schlegel, with a smile. "Yeah, and if I had had it," joked Smith, "You certainly wouldn't have gotten it."

"Nick Filler, former advertising director of OUT will continue in that position for OUT Las Vegas BUGLE," said Schlegel. "And Terry Wilsey, who was selling advertising for the BUGLE, will continue selling for the combined publication."

"I believe that through our combined efforts," Smith stated, "We'll do a better job informing, entertaining and educating the LGBT community in Southern Nevada."

We found we had more in common than we imagined. We also found that many of our previously, 'presumed disagreements' were simply that – 'presumed'

- Kelly Smith

There has been speculation about whether our merger is a purchase of the BUGLE by OUT or if it is a merger of equals. Stonewall will be the corporate name, but Kelly and I will be co-publishers.

Special Rights?

The Flaw in the Right Wings' Arguments

ANTI-GAY ACTIVISTS have had great success milking the claim that laws prohibiting discrimination against gay people serve to create "special rights." In fact, lately they've made the same charge about granting us the right to marry, to serve in the military, and to adopt children. They even go so far as to claim that repealing the so-called sodomy laws that turn gay lovers into criminals is almost like granting us those self-same "special rights."

It seems that, in the language of the bigots, mere equal rights under the law for lesbians and gays becomes equivalent to granting us an unfair and undeserved privilege (i.e., who do those perverts think they are, expecting to be treated the same as you and me?). Or perhaps it's just that they know if they repeat the "special rights" charge ad nauseam, then like any big lie it will eventually come to be perceived as true.

In fairness, there is a distinction that ought to be recognized between ensuring the government's non-discrimination against gays and lesbians (that is, prohibiting the state from treating sexual orientation as a reason to diminish the legal rights of citizenship), and limiting discrimination in the private sector. Some impressive gay intellectuals, including writer Andrew Sullivan, believe that the gay/lesbian political movement has put far too much energy on passing laws that limit the discretion of private employers and landlords to choose whom they hire or rent to, and not enough on stopping discrimination by the state itself. Gay libertarians argue that allowing the government to intrude into private decisions for any reason only serves to diminish everyone's liberty and freedom to associate with whomever they choose, where as discrimination by the state against a class of citizens is never acceptable, since the government represents all of us, and all of us are taxed to support it.

That's a debate that probably should be given more attention, but it's not my focus here.

Instead, I think it's worth noting the specific logic of those conservatives who support the principle that it's okay to stop private-sector discrimination against some groups, including those defined by race, nationality, or religious belief, but that extending this protection on the basis of sexual orientation is to uniquely afford us, again, "special rights." The argument usually goes that the reason sexual orientation is different is because it's a "lifestyle choice." As the anti-gay Family Research Council put it in a recent policy statement, "Unlike race, homosexuality is not a manifest characteristic, but a behavior."

Hmmm. Leaving aside the body of evidence indicating, at the very least, some genetic predisposition for being gay, there's a clear logical flaw in this right-wing gab. For while race and nationality are indeed a matter of birth, one's religion needn't be.

David Boaz, author of the book "Libertarianism: A Primer", has highlighted the issue of agreement about different protected classes. "Conservatives say gays shouldn't be protected, but blacks should, because being gay is something you choose, unlike your race," he writes. "But their reasoning is doubly wrong in that case: Most of us believe you DON'T choose your sexual orientation; but you DO choose your religion, which category conservatives want to protect." In fact, religious rightists, especially those who are "born again," stress that their brand of faith is something freely chosen. And, of course, many choose to adopt a faith different from their upbringing, while others abandon faith entirely.

Some conservative African-Americans, most notably General Colin Powell, claim that gays don't deserve protections because you can hide your sexual orientation, but not your race. While that's true enough, you can also hide your religious beliefs, yet no "anti gay rights" conservative to date has been willing to abandon hypocrisy and say that civil rights protections also should not extend to religion.

In fact, a growing number of civil rights cases before the federal courts focus on claims of workplace discrimination against fundamentalist Christians and Orthodox Jews. Many of these involve the plaintiffs' claim that requiring them to work on certain religious holidays amounts to discrimination, even though all employees are expected to work on those days (talk about demanding special rights!).

Leaving aside the die-hard "born agains," some who believe that religious belief should be a protected category, but that sexual orientation shouldn't, might argue that you don't really "choose" religious belief, it chooses you. That is, you either are drawn to the doctrines of a particular sect, or you aren't. But then again, even if you believe that being gay is also a choice (as, in fact, some gay and lesbian radicals proclaim), then how much "choice" do we really have about what we choose? Like religious belief, it either strikes one as right on a deep, personal level, or it doesn't.

The point of all this is to expose just how idiotic the argument that "gay rights" are somehow of a "special" nature, at least when compared to civil rights protections based on religion.

Looking back on it, I'm amazed that lesbian and gay activists have spent so much energy trying to convince people that sexual orientation is akin to race, when the religious belief analogy seems so much easier to justify. If the right wing is against "lifestyle choices" receiving anti-discrimination protection, then they should be forced to be consistent, and to surrender the "special rights" granted on the basis of religion.

After all, fair is fair.

Transgender People Gaining Protection in Many U.S. Cities Las Vegas and Nevada falling behind the times on civil rights

Over the last several weeks, several large cities have expanded their civil rights protections to include transgender people. National activists are beginning to see a trend that they hope continues to spread until state and federal government politicians begin to catch on as well.

On April 24, the City of New York voted to accept a bill that would prohibit discrimination in employment, housing and public accommodations (i.e. restrooms) based on "gender identity." The law was signed into effect a few days later.

Philadelphia followed suit not long after, when the City Council voted an overwhelming 15-2 in favor of a gender-identity protection bill on May 16. And on May 8, Dallas became the first city in Texas to pass legislation protecting city employees from discrimination based on gender identity.

While Employment Non-Discrimination Acts (ENDA) are becoming increasingly popular in most states (Nevada's passed in 1999), they often protect based on sexual orientation and leave out language to protect gender variant or transgender people.

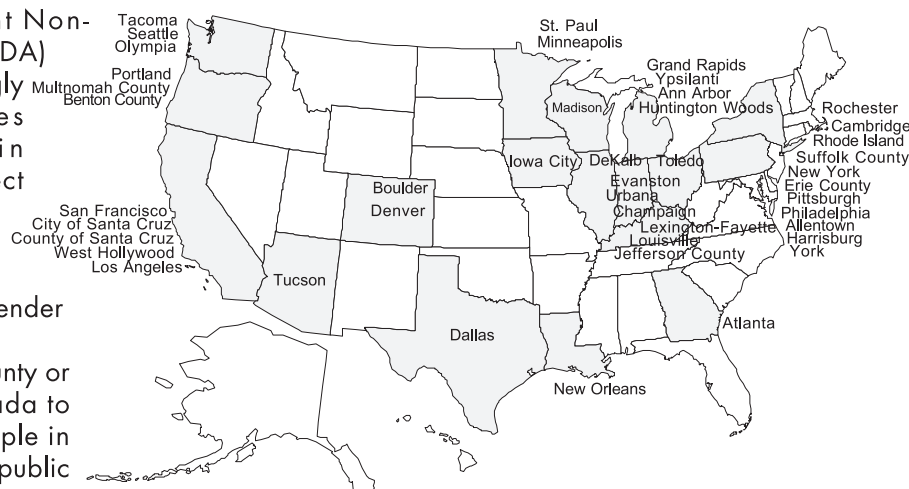

Currently, no city, county or state laws exist in Nevada to protect transgender people in employment, housing or public accommodations. Some cite the lack of a cohesive transgender community as the reason.

Richard Schlegel, Executive Director of Equal Rights Nevada, commented that Equal Rights Nevada would love to lead a local charge to get Nevada cities and counties to start considering these issues, but needs to focus on Question #2 until November 5th. "If we cannot defeat this attack on our basic rights, how can we hope to achieve other social advances."

Schlegel went on to ask for more support from all members of the LGBT community, to help prevent the passage of Q2 and finding ourselves with a government driven by extreme conservative ideology.

Human rights laws in the US that explicitly include transgender people

ERN & Stonewall Democrats Successful at State Convention

ERN's Liz Moore, Richard Schlegel and Burk Morrison.

In a decision much applauded by local leaders, the Nevada Democratic Party voted to adopt a statewide plank for the 2002 election which reads that the party "Opposes vigorously Question #2, the so-called Protection of Marriage Initiative on the November 2002 Ballot." Adding as well, "Supports the equal protection of rights and responsibilities for domestic partners, including same-gender couples, in the area of inheritance, medical decisions, insurance coverage, family leave, housing and consumer credit."

Members of Equal Rights Nevada and the Stonewall Democrats Club worked hard to ensure that the state's second largest political party would take a firm stance on the anti-gay ballot initiative which will be voted on in November's General Election. For more information on Question #2, contact Equal Rights Nevada at 702.650.9141

Las Vegas Arts Scene Expands Downtown Welcomes S2 Art Group

On June 21st, downtown Las Vegas may be one step closer to realizing its dream of becoming a vital artistic and cultural center. S2 Art Group, Ltd., will hold a ribbon cutting celebration at its 22,000 square foot facility located at One East Charleston.

Las Vegas Mayor Oscar Goodman will cut the ribbon, heralding a major key addition to the area he has worked very hard to promote and improve. Many leaders in the arts community, as well as civic leaders, politicians, art collectors, and media are expected to attend the event.

Mayor Goodman will also supervise the pulling of his own original lithograph, utilizing S2's Priceless and rare flatbed Viorin Marinoni press, manufactured in Paris in the 1860s.

S2 Art Group is one of the world's foremost publishers and retailers of art. S2 Art Group has facilities in New York and Chicago, and holds art galleries in both cities as well as New Orleans.

The opening of the facility is just one of the many exciting changes planned for downtown Las Vegas. For more information about the S2 Art Group, Ltd., you can visit www.s2art.com or call 1-888-976-5666.

Gay and Lesbian Community Center Hold Annual Meeting New Officers elected for upcoming year

On Wednesday, May 22, the Gay and Lesbian Community Center held its long overdue annual meeting to approve budgets, elect officers and make plans for the upcoming year. The meeting is open to all members of The Center, and was attended by approximately 20 people.

Garry L. Douglas was chosen as the new President of the Board of Directors, replacing Vince Percy, who moved out of state last month. A Las Vegas resident since 1988, Douglas has been the President of the NGR, co-chair of Las Vegas Gay Pride, and has co-chaired and staged two Pride Pageants. Garry has also performed in several Golden Rainbow shows.

James E. McMillen, who has been on the board for over a year, was elected to the position of Vice President. McMillen has been involved in the Lambda Business and Professional Association, American Cancer Society, and the Leukemia Society. He recently held the position of Treasurer for The Center. McMillen is a Vice President for Bank of America.

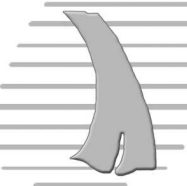

Kevin Hall, another returning board member, assumes the position of Treasurer. Hall has been the Center's bookkeeper for the last year. Michael LaRocca, who has been involved with St. Paul's Outreach, and volunteers at many community events, and was elected as Secretary of the Board of Directors. Guy Puglisi, the new Executive at Large, has been a dedicated volunteer for the NGR and many other non-profit organizations.

Other board members include: Sal Biazzo, D.O., Randy Lloyd, Patrick Lucas, Celena D. Quist, Leona Raulston, Brenda Stout, and Kyle E. West.

The new board is expected to help breathe new life into the programs and fundraising efforts of the community center. Executive Director, Bob Bellis, commented, "I think we have a great board, and I look forward to seeing the changes that we will be able to make over the next year."

The Center's annual meeting, traditionally held in January, was postponed several months this year due to the changing location and subsequent remodeling of the facility. Membership on the board has been waning and becoming scarce. Bellis and other members of the Center are relieved to see a full board of directors again.

For information about getting involved in the Center, please contact Bob Bellis at 702.733.9800

Cruising Vegas

with Celena Quist, Ms. Out Las Vegas

Cruising Vegas is about the fabulous and fantastic places to, well, cruise in Las Vegas. Narrated by Ms. Out Las Vegas, Celena Quist, who tells us how she and her friends have fun in Sin City.

Hi, everyone! I can't believe I let them talk me into taking that photo of me! Normally, I don't dress like that, but I was having a "lesbian chic" day I guess. Anyway, I had so much fun doing that photo shoot, that I decided it wouldn't hurt to get dressed up and get out a bit more often!

So I gathered my girlfriends for a night of exploring Vegas. We started the evening at Hamburger Mary's. I love eating out! And I wanted to make sure I had plenty of strength for the night ahead. I liked Hammy Mary's, a really liked the girls in there who looked like the busty little statue of their mascot! The guys were sweet and cute, too (according to my best gay boy friend). We all ate plenty of fattening foods, but I really enjoyed my burger on that delicious Hawaiian sweet bread.

After H.M., we decided to check out a "straight" club. We thought that the Ghost Bar at The Palms sounded fun, and none of us had been there before. Wow, there were some hot girls in there... too bad most of them were attached to the arm of some dumb guy. Oh well, we had fun teasing the straight guys by telling them we were lesbians but not explaining that there's a difference between real lesbians and the breast-implanted, bleached blonde chicks with long fingernails they see in the pornos. The craziest thing about the Ghost Bar is the patio that hangs out off the side of the building. It has a great view of Las Vegas, but the glass floor section, where you can look directly down 10 billion stories of empty air is freakish to stand on! I heard that they were filming the new season of MTV's Real World at The Palms, and we were hoping we might end up on camera at some point, but it didn't happen.

It was time to head back into "home territory" and finish the night at one the gay bars in town. My friends and I have decided that we're tired of hearing that there are no "women's bars" in the city, so we decided to break our way into one of the bars that usually only has boys. So, we went to Cobalt. Besides, we heard that they had this hot lesbian DJ Kya Rush on the weekends. We were not disappointed! Kya is gorgeous, the music was fun, and I think we chased all the boys out of there. My friends of the male persuasion who were out with us were a bit disappointed, but I wasn't too upset. At least the boys had hot bartenders to look at!

So after a night of food, fun and dancing, we finally decided to call it a night. All in all, not a bad time, and I can't wait to get out again. I hope to see you all out on the town and exploring new places!

The Movie Guy

Rique Rose

May was the month of gigantic openings, and no I'm not talking about Pride.

Your friendly neighborhood Spiderman and the fifth (actually the second) installment of the Star Wars series. Both movies have been widely anticipated for the last several years. Episode II, as the follow-up to the first in the retro-trilogy, and Spiderman has been drooled over and talked about since Marvel first spun the idea of a live action film.

I must admit that I was among the nasayers when it came to the casting of Tobey Maguire as the shy but hunky, often misunderstood superhero. All I could think was,..."Tobey Maguire?.. You mean the skinny, apple pickin, doctor-ette from "Cider House Rules?" Now however, I have never been so happy to be wrong. With a pumped up body, a fun and entertaining script, as well as the sincere charm of classic Peter Parker,...Maguire really soared as Spiderman. He is assisted by a sweet and very appealing Kirsten Dunst and Willem Dafoe as the ultimate schizophrenic villain The Green Goblin. The whole treatment is handled with a crafty "first of" feeling, so get ready for a slew of sequels. Maguire and Dunst are already signed for a trilogy and director Sam Raimi is a lock for at least one more film. I say bring on "Spidy II – Naked in New York."

Star Wars fans are also in for a treat. Especially if, like me, you were disappointed with Episode I. None of the backstory set-up in this one folks, just a lot of action and several ah-ha moments that bring many of the films interconnections into crystal clarity.

Summer Blockbusters: Spiderman and Star Wars II

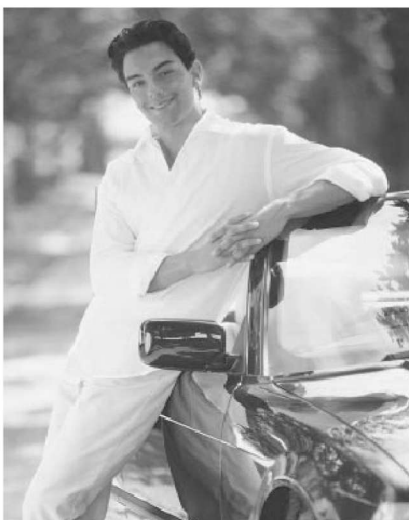

COMING SPRING OF 2002

Shot by Lucas completely with digital cameras, this movie has a much more integrated feeling between the live actors and the digital enhancements. That in itself helps you to become lost in the film without the distraction of,...."Oooh that looks fake!"

Also, in one of the most engaging scenes ever developed for the Star Wars movies we finally see Yoda get his "force" on. A great sequence that proves that Yoda is the Jedi master.

Both films are able to bridge the gap between technical advances and interesting storylines. Delivering the goods on all the hype, both movies give fans and first timers alike a good bang for their movie going buck.

Sanding Your Face: Microdermabrasion

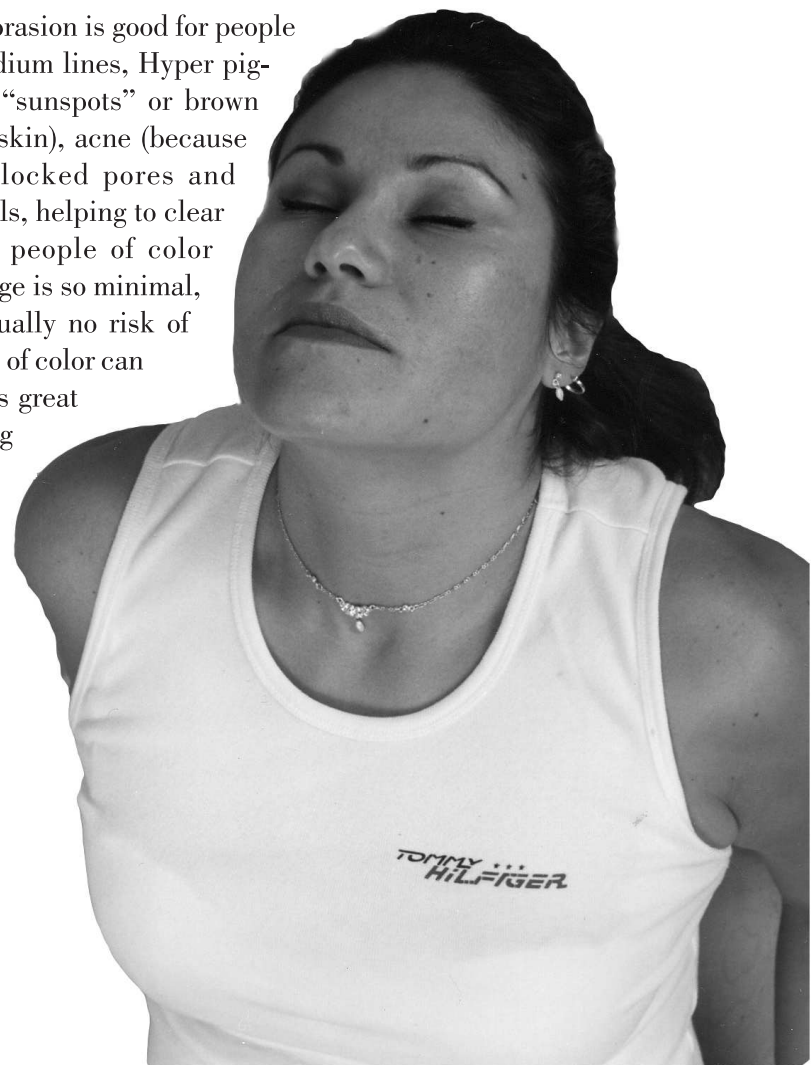

This month, we're talking about Microdermabrasion, the fastest-growing new procedure for skin health and maintenance. You're probably familiar with Dermabrasion, which uses either abrasive or wire wheels to strip off the surface of the skin (the precursor to Laser Resurfacing), and which has been around for a decade or so. The problem with Dermabrasion was that it took weeks to heal, could cause scarring, sometimes caused a worsening of skin conditions, and could not be used very effectively on people of color.

Microdermabrasion is the process of using a vacuum device to draw an abrasive material across the surface of the skin. Generally, the material used is Aluminum Oxide. This is the same material used in so-called abrasive or drill-less dentistry. Contrary to popular belief, Aluminum Oxide (we call it AlOx) is very safe and practically inert. It won't stay in your skin, and it doesn't penetrate or get into the body and cause Alzheimer's or any of that other stuff. Other materials used include salt and Bicarbonate of Soda, which are a little softer, and so somewhat less effective.

So, why would you want Microdermabrasion anyway? Microdermabrasion has taken off because it's a very good way of resurfacing the skin without significant damage, downtime, or cost. The idea is to remove the top layer of the skin and create a bunch of "micro-wounds" in the surface of the skin. These micro-wounds cause the body to produce a "healing response" which increases cell turnover, and builds collagen in the skin, which leads to younger, newer, fresher looking skin on the surface.

Microdermabrasion is good for people with fine to medium lines, Hyper pigmentation (i.e. "sunspots" or brown patches on the skin), acne (because it "unroofs" blocked pores and clogged materials, helping to clear the skin), and people of color (since the damage is so minimal, and there's virtually no risk of scarring, people of color can use it without as great a risk of losing pigment in their skin).

The procedure takes about 45 minutes (usually less on subsequent visits), and you have virtually no downtime. It can be performed by either a Licensed Esthetician or in a Dermatologist's or Plastic Surgeon's office, and costs about $150.00 per session. You need to do at least four to six sessions to see significant improvement, about a week apart for each session. A lot of places will give you a deal if you pay for all six sessions up front.

Advantages for you are softening of lines, especially around the eyes and mouth; clinical improvement in Acne conditions (your acne must be stable at the time of treatment); improvement of hyper pigmented areas, and a general improvement in look and tone of your skin. There are virtually no side effects, and it's a very safe procedure. My recommendation is to find someone who uses a "dual-motor" system (both vacuum and positive pressure) because it causes less "streaking" of the skin, and somewhat less redness post-procedure. Occasionally, you'll get welts or a little swelling, especially in sensitive areas. And you shouldn't do it if you're on Accutane, Retin-A, or another product LIKE Retin-A, or if you've had Botox or Collagen within a week of the procedure.

My opinion. I LOVE Microdermabrasion. It's very easy, gives highly effective, noticeable results quickly, is relatively inexpensive, and can improve the look of both lines and, particularly with Acne, can soften or reduce the look of scarring, as well as lead to clinical improvement in your skin. In addition, the removal of the top layer of the skin allows greater penetration of skincare products, which can also lead to a quicker improvement in the skin. It's one of the best tools available in the skincare business today. As usual, you should talk to your skin care guru, or whatever other professional person you rely on for good advice.

Finally, we want to invite you to write in with any questions you may have on skin care, grooming, and the like. Send your questions, comments, statistics (just kidding) whatever to: jamesmasonlv@juno.com, and we'll answer as many as we can in future columns. Stay pretty!

Backdoor Lounge Celebrates 25 years

The first and only time anyone ever proposed to me was at the Backdoor Lounge on December 3, 1979. I can't drive by the place today without thinking of that night I recorded in my journals 24 years ago:

"Donald and I went out to eat, then afterwards to drink at a place called the Backdoor, which used to be called Eve's. We sat near the fireplace at the edge of the dance floor on a couch and propped our feet up on a coffee table. The mirrored ball that revolved on the ceiling threw bright little squares of light around the room. I don't know why these little squares of light fascinate me, but I like sitting in discos watching them, and when I'm drunk they're a pleasant reason for not focusing my eyes. Tonight, Donald and I had wine. We talked. Donald told me he loved me and wanted me to be his lover. I listened and watched the little squares of light move across the floor revealing an oily footprint on the concrete y."

Well, the Backdoor Lounge lasted a hell of a lot longer than Donald and I did – 2002 marks the Backdoor's 25th year.

In the 1960s the backdoor was a popular straight bar called Eve's Fireside Lounge. Las Vegas nightclub entrepreneur Jack Galardi owned Eve's in the 1970s, and it was during his ownership the place became gay. In an interview in the March 1999 issue of Out Las Vegas, bartender Toby Dady described his part in turning the former straight bar into the gay Backdoor when his friends came in to visit and drink. Dady always bought the first round of shots for the gang, and then each of them in turn bought a round. As the number of gay patrons grew, Galardi noted his revenue increasing, so in October 1978 Eve's made the switch and became the Backdoor, which today is owned by Galardi's daughter, Teri. The Backdoor changed hands only once, when it was briefly owned by Bert Hood, who had owned the Red Barn on Tropicana Avenue for 16 years. Hood took over the Backdoor in 1988 and changed the name to Numbers. He built a stage and began hosting the kind of drag shows he'd made famous at the Red Barn. Hood operated Numbers until 1992 when he retired because of financial problems and lost the bar back to Jack Galardi.

The Backdoor Lounge has always provided the Las Vegas gay community with a meeting place and has supported fund raisers for a variety of causes and organizations. As early as 1983, the Women's Group of Nevadans for Human Rights – the first gay political group in Las Vegas – met every Friday night at the Backdoor. During the height of the AIDS epidemic in the mid-1980s, the Backdoor hosted fund raisers for AFAN. Delta Lambda Phi, the Community Counseling Center, the Gay and Lesbian Community Center, the Equal Right to Marry Coalition, and the Southern Nevada Gay and Lesbian Historical Society have all benefited from Teri Galardi's Backdoor fund raisers.

Galardi has also loaned her club for events honoring individuals who have contributed to the Las Vegas gay community. When famed dancer Ben Vargas was dying of cancer in May 1998, the Backdoor hosted a fund raiser and testimonial for him. For several years the Backdoor celebrated the Old Timers' Party, providing an opportunity for long-time community members to renew their friendships and honor one another.

Las Vegas's gay Latino community has also made the Backdoor its home. The Backdoor was celebrating Cinco de Mayo in the early 1980s, and since the 1990s the Fiesta Latina has been a regular event with its Mr. Gay Latino contest and Miss Backdoor pageant.

Long before the Las Vegas Lounge opened, the city's transgender community partied at the Backdoor's Sunday Trans Night.

But what the Backdoor is most noted for is its shows. Some of Las Vegas's most noted – and notorious – impersonators have performed here, including Sasha Scarlett and her Men of Adonis Male Revue; Drag Without a Net featuring Dee Dee Lewis, Shelly Michaels, and Bilma; JPC [Just Plain Cher]; and the Girls From Mesquite. The Las Vegas Mobile Drag Unit was reborn at the Backdoor on March 27, 1997, while the Imperial Royal Court of the Desert Empire has mounted several extravagant productions.

At its 4th Honorarium in 1997, the Gay and Lesbian Community Center honored Teri Galardi as Friend of the Community for her support throughout the years. An even higher honor came in May 2000 when the Reverend Wilhemina Parsons celebrated Galardi's new boob job with a photo in her Las Vegas Bugle column.

In February 1979, shortly after the Backdoor opened, a tourist from Chicago wrote a letter to the editor of the Vegas Gay Times expressing his pleasure with Las Vegas's newest bar, a sentiment the Las Vegas gay community still shares:

"Before I leave to return to my hometown of Chicago, I wish to say that I enjoyed the various bars I was able to visit while in your city. My compliments go out to the 1610, the Backdoor, and the Prelude, for they certainly showed what is good about being gay."

Frankly Speaking by Frank Marino The Blonde Porcupine

Dear Frank,

What's up with lesbian hair? Is it some sort of taboo among dykes to go to a cosmetologist? Do they want to look like they come from a trailer park? Gay Men Like Being Pretty

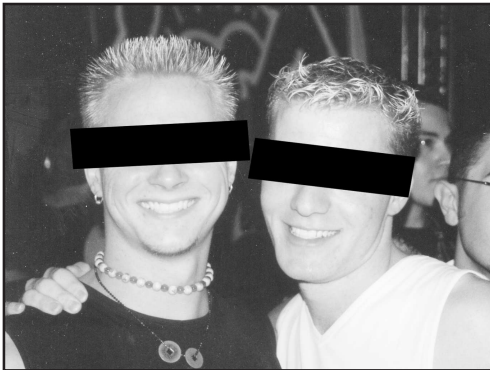

Dear GMLBP,

I think that you're horrified, like most of society, by continued sightings of the mullet (sometimes also called the "mudflap") where the sides are kept very short and the back and bangs are longer. Kid Rock and Lea Delaria have built careers around the mullet. I could spend my entire column writing about the ins and outs of the "official lesbian do," but it's been done so many times before.

Instead, I'd like to address the gay men's answer to the "mullet." I knew it was only a matter of time before we came up with an official hairstyle that immediately alerts the world that you're gay. It's especially popular among gay boys under the age of 30, or those over 30 desperately trying to look like a twink. I know you've all seen it many times before, and now you'll have a name for it - "The Blonde Porcupine."

Now, I checked with my hairdresser about an official name for the hairstyle, and he assured me that none existed, therefore, I have officially coined the coif. Put me down in the history books!

The Blonde Porcupine is hugely popular right now. To achieve the effect, start by bleaching your hair blonde (if it isn't already), or at least highlighting it until your hairdresser runs out of chemicals. Then, buy stock in a gel manufacturing company, because you'll need a bottle a day to turn your head into an immobile nest of spines. These can either be sharp and pointy, or curved and random, but the important thing about them is that THEY DO NOT MOVE for anything short of a class five tornado.

People who wear the Blonde Porcupine are fanatical - nearly insane - about anyone messing up the spines. If you doubt me, try to touch the hair of one of these guys in a bar - if you end up with a bloody stump, don't say I didn't warn you!

I'm not entirely sure how these guys take showers. I think their hearts would stop if they stepped out of the shower and their hair was laying flat against their head in the mirror. I'm also not sure how they have sex without freaking out about any hands or stay body parts ruffling the feathers.

There are variations on the Blonde Porcupine - sometimes boys will keep their natural hair color. Sometimes, they don't create spines, but do achieve a similar look by making all their hair stand straight up. Others choose to brush only their bangs up in a little number I call "The Duck Bill."

Gay boys have been known for starting trends and being individuals, but right now, I'm seeing a whole lot of "followers" out at the clubs. Come on, boys, it's time to change that coif to something a bit different.

Love, Frank.

Advice Should Be This Fabulous

Dear Frank,

I've been a big fan for years! I read your book, His Majesty, The Queen, from cover to cover and I never miss "Frankly Speaking." I even read your guest spot in the Review Journal's "Norm!" column. I learn a lot from everything you write, but I have a question... do you use a ghost writer, or do you do it all yourself? If so, any advice for an up-and-coming novelist?

Kenneth

Dear Kenneth,

When I originally started my 288 page book His Majesty, The Queen, I hired some ghost writers to help me get it done. They worked very hard and brought me a draft of the book, which I was a little unhappy with. I immediately sat down and rewrote every single word of it all by myself (with some help from my partner and a very patient editor).

For those of you who haven't read my book yet, it's a "tell-all" about being glamorous and my life. You can purchase a copy from my website, www.frankmarino.com

My advice to a young and beginning writer is to ask all your friends to read your first couple of drafts. Never be afraid of criticism, and plan to spend a lot of time on rewrites. Just like walking in heels, the first couple of tries are always the hardest, but with practice and support, you'll be strutting down the runway in no time.

I know its hard for many people to believe that I did write my book, because no one should be blessed with this much beauty, talent and brains, but that's the case. Thanks for reading.

Love, Frank.

Frank's Weirdo Letter of The Month

Dear Frank,

I've developed a strange rash from the duct tape I use when I do drag. I've tried all sorts of powders and ointments to get rid of the redness and swelling, but nothing seems to help. You obviously do this a lot, any thoughts?

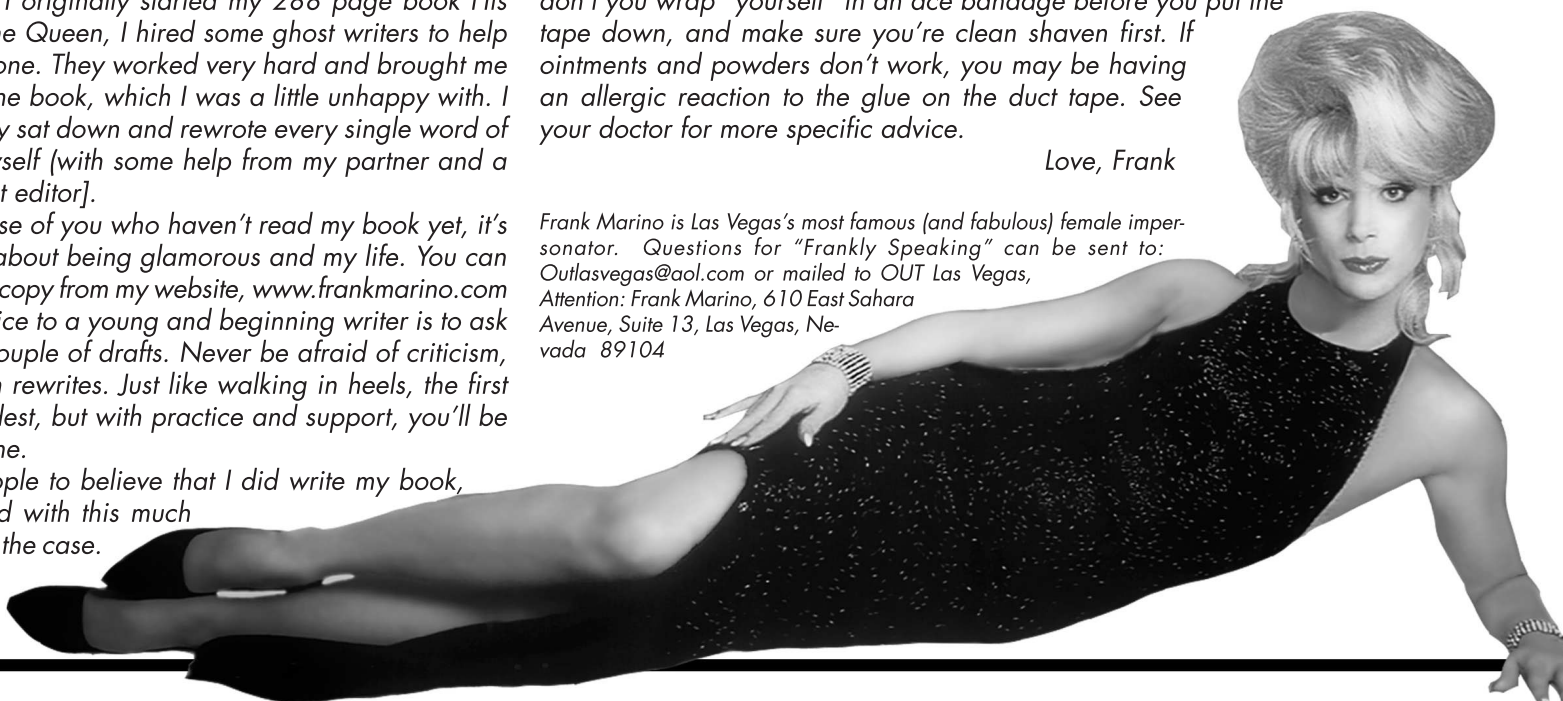

Red NetherRegions

Dear Red,

Stop using the duct tape, or at least stop using it directly on your skin. Why don't you wrap "yourself" in an ace bandage before you put the tape down, and make sure you're clean shaven first. If ointments and powders don't work, you may be having an allergic reaction to the glue on the duct tape. See your doctor for more specific advice.

Love, Frank

Miss Chastity BeltOn: The First

Bringing Gossip Back To The People!

I've got orders to get this column in early and make it short! It's so chaotic at the OUT office right now that you have to wonder what in the world Kelly and Rob were thinking when they got the hair-brained idea to merge the BUGLE and OUT. I was momentarily elated when I heard Auntee Social would only be writing her column in every-other-issue. I mean, imagine me, having to share newsprint with her! Then our damn editor, Jere Keys, informed me I would be writing on the off-weeks. The nerve! OUT's editor doesn't want my column in every issue but at least I'll be gaining two issues per year — now that the combined newspaper will be every two weeks, while Auntee Social gets cut by 13 issues. Plus, I'm getting my column in the first issue, which should tell everyone where that bitch Auntee Social stands.

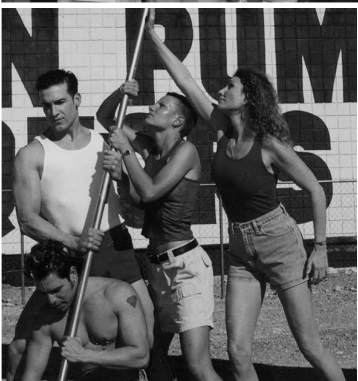

Enough! I've promised to try and get along, so welcome to the new OUT Las Vegas BUGLE. And, Ms. Social, darling ... (they're forcing me to write this) ... welcome to OUT Las Vegas BUGLE and I'm just thrilled that you'll be sharing office space with me (but you'll have to take the small desk over in the corner since I was here first).

The Thursday before Pride was Vince Percy's going away party. Yes, The Center President Vince Percy is leaving for Nebraska. Well, he is GONE! His bosses thought he was having too much fun in Vegas and decided to give him a pay-raise to go back to Nebraska. Money isn't everything honey and I know you will be back in my arms in no time! It was a great excuse to have a party and I hear the oh so adorable Patrick Lucas, along with sexy Marc Garcia, Rique Rose, James Mann, John Arnos, Chris Dunbar, and my James Healy rented one of those excursion limos and drove him around toasting the town. Bitch, Why wasn't I invited!

Wasn't Pride fabulous? I won't even guess at how many folks were there for the Parade and Festival but everyone did a wonderful job. Annette Hall and her crew were outstanding but if I could offer one little suggestion. Darlings! What are we proud of? The Rainbow? Somebody forgot to mention gay, lesbian, bisexual or even transgender in most of the advertising for the event. It was just "Rainbow Pride" — you would think the folks over at What's On magazine did the ad campaign. You've heard of What On' In Las Vegas? It's a local tourist publication that is calling every advertiser in both the BUGLE and OUT, trying to sell them ads. Girls, they won't let them print "gay or lesbian" in their ads! What's On's banner was hanging near the main stage at Pride but this magazine is so homophobic they make the Gipsy call themselves an "alternative club."

Everyone knows Robin and Tim "Sky King" from Integrity Chrysler Plymouth. The boys showed up early for the Pride Parade and shortly after the event, Tim discovered his wallet was missing. Just as he was calling to cancel all his credit cards, he got a phone call from a California tourist who had found the wallet and the guy returned it, intact with every credit card and all the cash. The sweetheart wouldn't even consider a cash reward so Robin and Tim rented a limo and took the guy out-on-the-town. We understand they didn't get home until 6 a.m. If you need a car, call them now — while they're still feeling so generous.

Of course, I'm still exhausted from nearly a non-stop week of partying ... Tim and Robin have got nothing on me! Speaking of "nothing on", that's just about what it was like at Wet's foam party on opening night. Everyone was there, including some of the hottest studs from Los Angeles and San Francisco. Kevin Rhodes, a.k.a. Miss Visa DeKline, was fabulous at the door and it seemed she knew all the celebrities who attended. Dov Morocco, Wet's manager, didn't look very "managerial" in his skimpy (but well packed) yellow swim suit. My favorite moment was when Dov approached shy, bashful me (yeah, right) and asked me to help him get out of his soaking wet clothing. I helped him out, all right!

Queen of Gossip!

"I'm Not Your Auntee, and I'm Not Very Social with My New Office Roomie"

Did you hear about Bob Bellis' stellar performance at the Honorarium? What an act ... and it worked! He got up on stage, choked up (tears and all!) about what a great service The Center is doing for our youth and (former) Mayor Jan Jones marched to his rescue. Bob had been tearfully pleaded for $10 to $50 donations to buy chairs and a pool table. Jan pushed him aside and started asking for the big bucks. In about five minutes she raised nearly $9,000! Bellis must have planned the whole thing but he sure acted surprised. The Center netted about $30,000 that night and we had a chance to honor Jack Novick, Liz Moore, Lee Plotkin, John Ralston and Wells Fargo Bank. Kudos to everyone who contributed.

It seems that a cute new guy is pulling double duty at Wet and at Cobalt these days. The "2QT2BSTR8" guy goes by the unlikely name of Kevin and despite his fierce good looks, he's actually rather bashful. I did coax him into letting me take a few pictures, but there is one I'm "not allowed to print." I think he needs a little shot of self-esteem. Everyone tell Kevin that you'd like to see more of him in a future issue of OUT Las Vegas BUGLE.

A special note to all my female readers. The OUT office has been flooded with phone calls and everyone wants to know the name of the girl wearing hot pants on the front cover of the Pride Directory and OUT's Yellow Pages. I wouldn't mind the calls so much if the women would stop panting over the legs! It's Kaye Taylor, owner of the FreeZone and I understand she'll be wearing the same outfit next Tuesday at the FreeZone's ladies' night. If you want her phone number, ask her yourself! And everyone thinks the FreeZone is only known for it's Thursday Boyz' Night – well, I must admit to having scored a few dozen dates – but they've got one hell-of-a dance party on the weekends, plus a great drag show.

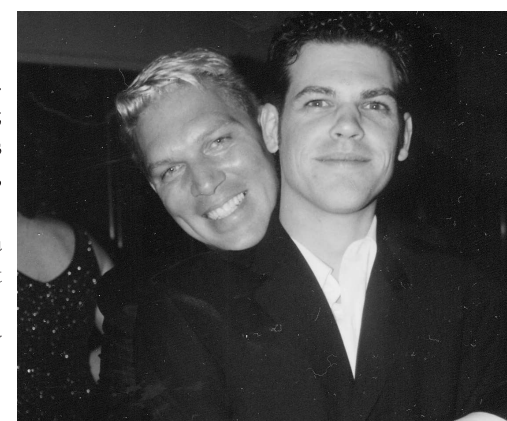

Don't miss our new bar guide – which is located in the classified section – because you'll find the "lowdown" on Icon, Sasha's Place, the Eagle, Backdoor, Badlands, Goodtimes, Flex, Cobalt, Las Vegas Lounge, the Spotlight, Hamburger Mary's and all the other places that make Las Vegas THE place for the GLBT-members to party. In addition to our locals, thousands of tourists read this publication (now, every two weeks!) and the area map in the back of this magazine has become the road map to fun. The circulation of OUT Las Vegas BUGLE will soon sky-rocket to over 15,000 copies!

I'm out-of-space so check out the bar ads for some wild and fun events that will be happening in the next few days. Specifically, catch the new Cabana Boy (Rum!) contest at Mary's; best wishes to Doug Locke, the new manager at FreeZone; congrats to the Eagle's "Grandma-Once-Again" Judy Nelson and cheers to the Pride Pageant winners which include Murphy as Ms. Gay Pride, Sebastian as Mr. Gay Pride and Sasha Renee as Miss Gay Pride. I saw a lot of Mr. Sebastian in the OUT Las Vegas booth at pride (if you get my drift), and I have the pictures to prove it! Honey, let's talk about hush money...

And finally ... we were always told that Teri Galardi was conceived in the backroom at the Backdoor Lounge but we're a bit confused. The Backdoor just celebrated it's 25th anniversary on May 25 and Teri claims to be 29, so how is that possible? Just wanted to leave you all wondering.

Don't even bother picking up the next issue (June 7) of OUT Las Vegas BUGLE because Auntee Social will most likely have nothing important to say but be sure and catch me again on July 21.

As always, play hard and be safe!

What Women Want

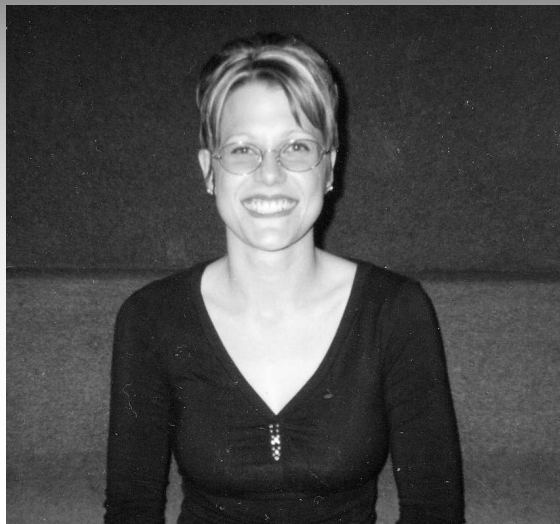

A look into the views of the Las Vegas Lesbian community. It is my objective to find women around Las Vegas who are willing to express their concerns and ideas for the purpose of getting the women of Las Vegas to come out and get more involved in the community. Reading what others feel or believe may help them to find a place to get together or meet the person of their dreams.

Q • When a woman tells you she is bi-sexual, what exactly does that mean to you?

Celinda
33, Entertainer, Nurse Ratchet

A: A woman says she is bi-sexual, I believe she's new to the lesbian world and in denial. Actually, that's gross. Pick a side and stay on it. Lesbians don't like bi-sexual women, at least I don't. If a woman does like both well, so be your swinging self, but please don't bring it in our community. Best of both worlds? No thanks!

Jessica Mclean
22, Retail sales

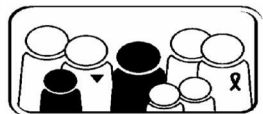

A: To me it means that she obviously likes to be with both men and women. But at the same time, is confused. It's either one or the other.

Catherine
45, Lab Technician and Entertainer, Nurse Ratchet

A: It's a sick nasty word, bi-sexual, nothing a true lesbian would want. It means that she prefers a man or a woman, which ever she is attracted to. What turns her on the most. Personally I only prefer women and have a special lady in my life that I love with all my heart and I want to spend my life with her. True feelings from a true lesbian.

Peeping With Tom

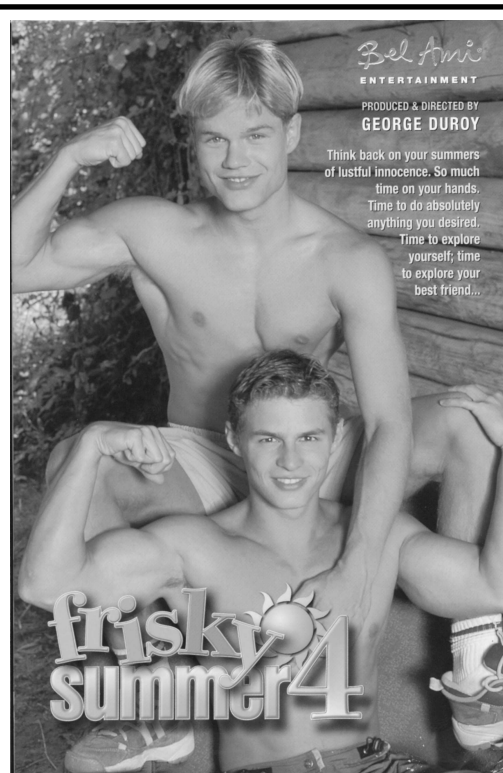

By Tom Moilanen

Given the current climate concerning sex and youth, I'm almost a bit skittish covering my selections for this month's column. However, my fierce instincts and journalistic integrity prevent me from succumbing to such societal pressures, not to mention the absolute fact that everything in my stock is perfectly legal, verifiable, and codified. (How sad that we live in the age of the disclaimer, but at least my butt is covered. In fact, those who have seen it agree it's probably best to keep it that way.)

But seriously, remember the days when being 'priestley' was in reference to a cute guy on "Beverly Hills, 90210"? Now it carries tons of emotional baggage, like a bellman at a psychoanalyst's convention (or Mariah Carey on a good day - take your pick). And what's even more surprising is the exaggerated shock at these revelations. People, snap out of it. Your naiveté is showing. Throw a frock over it, willya?

Now that I've slithered past my mandatory opening paragraphs of meaningless blather, I suppose I could get to the good stuff. (Isn't that where Dr. Frankenstein made his lover? In a mandatory? Word is he had quite the monster, you know.) Folks, director George DuRoy and the gang at Bel Ami Studios have done it again with their recent release entitled "Frisky Summer 4". True to form, this little goodie is shot with the same flawless execution Bel Ami is famous for. The texture, lighting, camera angles, and backdrops could not be improved upon.

Although quality technicianship certainly contributes to the whole experience, DuRoy's real strength lies in his models. He appears to have an endless supply, as is evident by his extensive set of audition tapes in the "101 Men" series. From these he selects the lucky few who get to make a full-feature flick, and each new release carries a cast of newcomers, with repeat performances only by major Bel Ami stars (Lukas Ridgeston and Johann Paulik come to mind).

"Frisky Summer 4" features Tim Hamilton, an incredibly beautiful blonde boy who debuted in a behind-the-scenes documentary. Do I have a thing for blondes? Yes. Are my reviews biased and slanted? Of course! Ethics in the media is but a fantasy, so get used to it. To be fair, there are plenty of brunettes in this flick who are equally as stimulating, and not one scene that doesn't sizzle with erotic intensity.

These guys are young, in the 18-22 ranges. That's DuRoy's trademark. They are also built a touch past twink level, yet certainly not what you'd call muscle-bound. They are all smooth and cute, and exude a playful exuberance that is too authentic to not be...well, authentic. It's no wonder this is the fourth flick from Bel Ami with the word 'frisky' in the title, as it most accurately describes the playful romps we've come to expect. These boys are completely uninhibited and put fun above all else, which contributes to the naughtiness involved with young male experimentation.

As an added bonus, the closing scene is a 20-boy orgy filmed in and around a European pool and spa (Bel Ami operates out of the Czech Republic, incidentally). Porn orgies are often so busy and frenetic that they generally amount to merely a screen full of flesh. But this one is shot with care and precision, yet it allows for the spontaneity and frivolity necessary for it to work. If this segment doesn't get you going, you're either dead or hopelessly heterosexual.

I love Bel Ami's stuff. It is so well produced, and its emphasis on youth brings out the priest in me. I bow in reverence to these guys, and it's a comfort to know some of them might like to think of me as 'Daddy'. Thank goodness they don't call me 'Father'.

To illustrate that man cannot live by youth alone (at least pornographically speaking), I must make mention of another new release by an outfit called BuffStuff Video. It's called "Twink Heaven", and it's directed by a fellow named Eric Magyar. Good thing he isn't named Eric the Magnificent, because his work is anything but. (I know a magnificent Eric, but that, to pinch a phrase, is another column.)

Magyar has what is essentially a home-brewed amateur flick on his hands, but he tries to pass it off as a legitimate full-scale production. It opens with a couple of quick interviews, then launches into a totally contrived pizza boy seduction scene. This set-up is a staple in gay porn (or any porn, for that matter), and needs to be drawn out in length and manipulative in nature if it's going to succeed.

The guys are relatively cute in a skater/punk sort of way, with smooth bodies, youthful faces, and sizeable appendages. However, their sex is uninspired and cumbersome, sorely lacking in any real erotic value. The queeniest of the bunch happens to have an affinity for his feet, which results in another kid sucking on a toe or two. Sorry, gang - I may eat a turkey leg now and again, but toes live inside shoes. They come in contact with the floor. Think about it. Of course, the sex organs can perform some pretty disgusting stunts, but don't confuse me with the facts.

"Twink Heaven" just kind of stumbles along, unsure of its genre or theme. Had Magyar chosen to present this as amateur footage, I'd consider it a winner. It has all the elements of an Uncle Don special - unknown models, jerky camera motions, interviews, awkward sex play, and an attitude of indifference. Add a little coercion and you've got The Body Shoppe. But Eric the Magnificent decided to get artsy, which was a fatal mistake. He needs to re-title this "Twink Heaven Can Wait", as true paradise lies across the pond in Prague, in the mind and eye of master George DuRoy.

(Congratulations to my friends Mike and Kelly, who have been nothing short of terrific to me!)

Speaking OUT

By Rev. Bill Morin

Aries (March 20-April 19): As the month starts out, tensions mount on the home front. Serious/in depth talk will be needed to diffuse the situation. Your health looks just fine, but it wouldn't hurt to lose 10 pounds. Wait until the 11th to make any sort of ultimatums. Look toward late June to provide a welcome relief from your usual routine.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You'll emerge from a short term self imposed exile around the 7th. It won't take long getting back into the swing of things. Your intuition is right on the mark regarding a potential business deal. Don't be pressured into doing a rather large favor. Long sought answers come to light as June closes.

Gemini (May 21-June 21): That Solar Eclipse, which takes place in your sign on the 10th, will trigger a 3-month powerful financial cycle. Major opportunities will seem to just fall into your lap. It's just too bad that your love life won't follow suit. The problem is that you can't seem to stay with a lover for a length of time. Isn't that tiresome?

Cancer (June 22-July 22): Unlike Gemmy, your affair of the heart is in full bloom and is absolutely intoxicating. It could be keeping you from thinking clearly though (rose colored glasses are wonderful). Learn to separate business from pleasure, especially on the 19th. Once the Sun moves to your sign, you'll be able to think more clearly.

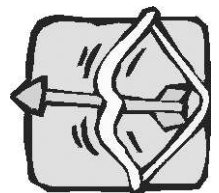

Leo (July 23-August 22): June starts out with you "flying solo", but that sure won't be the case as it closes. Prepare yourself for this wonderful experience, Leo. Watch your energy levels mid month, as that upper respiratory system could become irritated. Weekend getaway late in the month will make your spirits soar.

Virgo (August 23-September 22): The eclipses that take place on the 10th (solar) & 24th (lunar) shall both be in stress aspects to your sign. This creates extra pressure, but that's not necessarily a bad thing. It'll likely add some momentum where career matters are concerned. Late June brings a surprise out of town visitor to your door.

Libra (September 23-October 22): An ongoing legal matter has no end in sight. Try to be more patient with your significant other on the 8th & 9th. Sleep patterns look scrambled all month long. Watch that lower back when lifting or working out. Good financial news on the 30th brings a long overdue smile to that oh so handsome face.

Scorpio (October 23-November 21): Some "on the job" frustrations spill over from last month. Avoid confronting the boss at all costs before the 20th. You won't be feeling very social on the 13th & 14th. Finish off that dental work before the 24th. A younger sibling will be in need of your guidance as the month ends. Offer it gladly.

Sagittarius (November 22-December 21): Last month provided many challenges and this month brings multiple rewards. The eclipse pattern that began on May 26th will have you flying high right through September. A major financial obstacle is removed. Money owed you won't require filing suit to get, but you need to be more diplomatic.

Capricorn (December 22-January 19): A change in eating habits would sure boost that tired metabolism. Keep that suitcase close by, because several business trips will occur during the month. Don't forget that special anniversary or you risk sleeping on the couch for a spell. Eclipse in your sign on the 24th brings a sense of calm.

Aquarius (January 19-February 18): That newfound feeling of freedom won't last more than a couple of weeks. You're just not meant to be alone for very long. The urge to relocate might be powerful, but the timing is all wrong. Get back into doing workouts to relieve that restlessness. Special gift on the 27th makes your heart soar.

Pisces (February 19-March 20): June provides a real financial roller coaster ride for you. Don't expect 100% approval from certain family members (you can't argue with closed minds, ok?). Load up on fluids to prevent the recurrence of an old kidney irritation. Look into taking a night class or two as the fall approaches. It'll be fun.

GAY/NUDE BEACH (USE CAUTION)
Head east on Lake Mead Blvd. out of North Las Vegas. Continue past Hollywood Blvd. and past the new park entrance gate ($5 fee). Proceed several miles until you come to the stop sign. Turn left and head north toward Overton. 4.8 miles later (clock it, or get lost!), make a right turn onto the gravel 8.0 (highway marker) road. Veer left at every fork in the road. Park in the lot overlooking the lake and hike North for about 5 minutes into a little ravine and over a hill along a narrow trail. And keep your cloths on until you get there! Warning: Park rangers while "they don't object to nudity", if they see you nude, you may be cited for "lewd and lascivious behavior" and get a $200 fine. If you should happen to be cited, plead "not guilty" and most likely charges will be dropped.
