Whether you're a local or tourist, we always feature our favorite spots along with all the new and exciting things our city has to offer.

We close out Women's History Month and Transgender Day of Visibility with a cover feature from New York Artist Martine Gutierrez and three photographic self-portraits from her comprehensive work Indigenous Woman (2018) that confront ideas of globalism, identity and femininity through recreations of herself as Tyra Bank's Eve Doll and Indigenous Mesoamerican deities, Chin and Xochipilli.

Bellagio Gallery of Fine Art (BGFA) is celebrating spring's flourishing beauty with its newest exhibition, In Bloom, open through September 10. Showcasing nationally and internationally recognized artists, this collection of 30 works explores themes of rejuvenation, humanity and collective change.

Bellagio Gallery of Fine Art Celebrates Spring with Colorful New Exhibition

“In Bloom” on Display through Sept. 10, Showcases Vibrant Works That Challenge Guests to ‘Live Life in Full Bloom’

Martine Gutierrez, a Brooklyn-based multimedia artist, has made a name for herself by exploring themes of identity, gender, race, and cultural appropriation in her work. Her 2018 project Indigenous Woman is an excellent example of her ability to blend abstraction with figurative and symbolic elements, resulting in thought-provoking self-portraits that challenge societal norms and expectations.

The use of major fashion labels in her outfit adds an additional layer of commentary on the fashion industry's tendency to borrow from Indigenous traditions and aesthetics. By incorporating these items into her self-portraits, Gutierrez effectively highlights the issue of appropriation and its potential to erase or dilute the cultural significance of these traditions. At the same time, she demonstrates how her own identity as a trans woman of Indigenous and Latinx heritage is shaped by these cultural intersections.

Gutierrez's Indigenous Woman project serves as a powerful statement on the complexities of identity in the modern world, particularly for marginalized individuals. By using her own body as a canvas, she creates a striking visual representation of the numerous forces that converge to shape our understanding of ourselves and others. As a result, her work encourages viewers to question societal norms, engage in conversations about cultural appropriation, and ultimately, develop a deeper appreciation for the richness and diversity of human experience.

In Bloom is on display daily at Bellagio Gallery of Fine Art through September 10 from 10 a.m. – 6 p.m. Last admissions are sold 30 minutes prior to closing time.

Tickets are $20 for adults; $17 for Nevada residents, seniors 65 and older, students, teachers and military with a valid ID. Children 5 and younger are free. Complimentary audio guides are available online or on a hand-held device in English, Spanish and Mandarin.

Through these self-portraits Martine Gutierrez transforms herself into Indigenous Mesoamerican deities, Chin and Xochipilli, she draws attention to the complex interplay of globalism, identity, and femininity. Gutierrez invites the viewer to question preconceived notions of identity and consider the impact of cultural appropriation on marginalized communities.
