With a proud publishing legacy that dates back to 1978, QVegas has been at the heart of Las Vegas' LGBTQ+ community for over four decades. What began as a grassroots newsletter has evolved into a dynamic weekly publication that informs, celebrates, and amplifies queer voices across Southern Nevada. QVegas is available in print at over 30 LGBTQ+ establishments, community nonprofits, and partner advertiser locations, making it a vital part of the local scene.

Beyond the printed page, QVegas connects with readers through a robust digital presence—on the web, across all major social media platforms, in our dedicated iOS app, and through weekly email blasts that keep the community in the know. Our coverage spans nightlife, entertainment, politics, health, advocacy, and the everyday stories that make up the diverse LGBTQ+ experience in Las Vegas.

As an advertiser-supported publication, QVegas is the most effective way to reach LGBTQ+ locals and visitors alike—offering unparalleled access to one of the city's most loyal and engaged audiences. In an era where equality rights are under attack nationwide, QVegas stands as a strong and unwavering community partner, committed to visibility, representation, and celebrating the power of queer voices.

Las Vegas Lights Up: Sisters' 20th Anniversary, Conclave, Historic Fruit Loop NCOD & Oktoberfest

This week's issue focuses on what's happening now across our community. We spotlight the Sin City Sisters as they mark 20 years of service and prepare to host their first Las Vegas Conclave, October 8–12. The public highlight, Absolution (October 11 at The Usual Place), blends camp, consent-forward education, and support services—an on-brand mix of celebration and care.

Save the date for the National Coming Out Day Block Party at the Historic Fruit Loop (October 11, 6–11 p.m.), following the district's designation as a historic landmark. Expect a ceremonial ribbon cutting led by State Sen. Fabian Doñate, performances from the casts of Gipsy and Piranha, DJs, vendors, and on-site rapid HIV testing.

Across town, Hofbräuhaus Las Vegas pours into its 21st annual Oktoberfest season (through November 1), kicked off with the ceremonial first keg by Clark County Commissioner Tick Segerblom and a slate of weekend celebrity keg tappers. It's a reminder that tradition thrives when the community shows up—stein in hand.

Inside the issue, you'll find practical health resources (PrEP, DoxyPEP, local clinics) and our growing directory of LGBTQ+ organizations, bars, shows, and services. Use it to plan your week and connect with the people and places that keep our city vibrant.

Programming update: beginning in October, QVegas shifts to a bi-weekly schedule—same coverage, now with a two-week shelf life for each issue. We're also launching QVegas Arrivals, a tourism-forward edition debuting at Harry Reid International Airport to welcome visitors with must-see shows, dining, nightlife, and resources from the moment they land. Two editions, one mission: inform, celebrate, and connect Southern Nevada's LGBTQ+ community.

Thanks for reading, sharing, and supporting the work. We'll see you under the Fruit Loop lights—and all season long at the events that bring us together.

Save the Date: National Coming Out Day Block Party Returns to the Historic Fruit Loop

The Historic Fruit Loop is throwing a homecoming—and you're invited. On Saturday, Oct. 11, 2025, from 6–11 p.m., Las Vegas's beloved LGBTQ+ district will host the National Coming Out Day Block Party, a free, outdoor celebration of visibility, authenticity, and community pride. This year's event carries special significance: it follows the Nevada Legislature's formal recognition of the Fruit Loop as a historic landmark, honoring the neighborhood's decades-long role as a safe space and cultural hub for LGBTQ+ people and allies.

Festivities begin with a ceremonial ribbon cutting led by State Sen. Fabian Doñate, who championed the Fruit Loop's new designation. It's a moment that recognizes what so many already know: the Fruit Loop isn't just a destination—it's a living archive of local LGBTQ+ history, a corridor of clubs and community where generations have found joy, support, and chosen family.

From there, the block party swings into full celebration mode with live entertainment featuring the casts of Gipsy and Piranha Nightclub, alongside performers from the Las Vegas Strip, local DJs, musicians, and more. Expect high energy, big talent, and a lineup that showcases the many creative voices that call this neighborhood home. (A full entertainment schedule will be announced soon.)

Beyond the stage, the event expands into a vibrant community footprint. Attendees can explore a community garden and resource fair with food trucks, LGBTQ+ vendors, and resource booths staffed by local nonprofits and community partners. In alignment with the district's long-standing commitment to advocacy and wellbeing, on-site rapid HIV testing will be available—affirming that celebration and community care go hand-in-hand.

"The recognition of the Fruit Loop as a historic landmark is more than a designation—it's a testament to the generations who built this community, found joy here and made this space a home," says Garrett Pattiani, creative director of Gipsy. "We are thrilled to celebrate this history with the community on National Coming Out Day, honoring the past while looking forward to an even brighter and more inclusive future."

Why National Coming Out Day Matters

Observed every year on October 11 since 1988, National Coming Out Day (NCOD) is a day of visibility and empowerment for the LGBTQ+ community. For many, it marks a personal milestone—the first time they share who they are with friends, family, coworkers, or the world. For others, it's a chance to honor those moments of truth and to stand in solidarity with people who can't safely be out.

NCOD also serves a broader purpose. Visibility helps demystify, humanize, and connect, reminding everyone that LGBTQ+ people are part of every neighborhood, every industry, and every family. In that spirit, the Fruit Loop's NCOD Block Party is both celebration and statement: a festive, public affirmation that Las Vegas's queer community is not only present, but proudly shaping the culture of the city.

The Fruit Loop's Historic Presence

Long before hashtags and headline campaigns, the Fruit Loop was where Las Vegas's queer nightlife and community built roots. Anchored by pioneering venues and sustained by countless nights of performance, protest, fundraising, and fellowship, the district became a place where people could gather openly, grow networks of care, and create culture on their own terms. Recognizing the Fruit Loop as a historic landmark acknowledges that these streets and spaces didn't just host good times; they nurtured a movement.

Over the years, the Fruit Loop's role has evolved alongside the city, but its core ethos remains the same: show up, be yourself, and support one another. From nightlife to nonprofit outreach, the block is a crossroads where entertainment and advocacy meet—making it a fitting home for Las Vegas's NCOD celebration.

What to Expect on Oct. 11

Ribbon Cutting (6 p.m.)

Kick off the evening with an official ceremony led by State Sen. Fabian Doñate, honoring the Fruit Loop's new historic landmark status and the community that made it possible.

Live Entertainment

Performances from the casts of Gipsy and Piranha Nightclub, plus special guests from the Strip, local DJs, and musicians. Bring your friends—this is a show-stopper kind of night.

Community Garden & Resource Fair

Explore food trucks, connect with local nonprofits and community partners, and shop LGBTQ+ vendors offering art, apparel, and more.

On-Site Rapid HIV Testing

Easy, confidential, and available on-site—because community health is central to community pride.

A Block Party—And a Love Letter

If you're new to Las Vegas or new to the Fruit Loop, this is the perfect night to experience the neighborhood at its most welcoming and alive. If you're a longtime local, it's a night to revisit memories, reconnect with friends, and celebrate a well-earned milestone for a district that has given so much to the city.

Circle the date, gather your crew, and come celebrate authenticity under the Fruit Loop lights. On National Coming Out Day, we honor the past, uplift the present, and make space—together—for every story still unfolding. See you Oct. 11.

Hofbräuhaus Las Vegas Raises the First Stein for Its 21st Annual Oktoberfest

Hofbräuhaus Las Vegas has officially kicked off the city's most authentic Oktoberfest, returning for its 21st year of beer, brats, and Bavarian revelry from Friday, September 5 through Saturday, November 1, 2025. Fittingly, the first tap went to a man who knows how to start a party in Southern Nevada: Clark County Commissioner Tick Segerblom. With a ceremonial swing on Friday night, Segerblom cracked open the first keg and set the tone for a season of oompah beats, clinking steins, and joyful Gemütlichkeit.

If you've never celebrated Oktoberfest at Hofbräuhaus, imagine a faithful slice of Munich in the heart of Paradise Road: communal tables buzzing with sing-alongs, guests dancing on benches, servers in dirndls and lederhosen threading through the hall with armfuls of liter-size mugs, and the unmistakable snap of a fresh pretzel being shared among friends. The star, of course, is the beer—premium imports from Hofbräu München—poured cold and plentiful, including the limited-time Oktoberfestbier that keeps the celebration flowing.

This year's festivities are more robust than ever. Every Friday and Saturday night, a special guest takes the stage to tap the evening's keg and ignite the crowd. After Segerblom's opening night, award-winning magic and mentalism duo The Conjurers, Matthew Pomeroy and Natasha Lamb, kept the momentum going on Saturday, September 6. The celebrity roster ahead is a who's-who of Vegas favorites and national names: radio personalities like 98.5 KLUC's The Chet Buchanan Show; Las Vegas Review-Journal host and creator JJ Snyder; headliners including "America's Got Talent" winner Terry Fator; international recording artist Jasmine Trias with Ben Stone; the ladies of Luxor's FANTASY; the world-famous Chippendales; family rockers The Bronx Wanderers; pro BMX star Ricardo Laguna; Heather Collins of Mix 94.1 and @raisedinvegas; shimmering showstopper Melody Sweets; and UFC legend Randy Couture, whose tapping will benefit the LVMPD Foundation's K9 Section. Rounding out October are "Pawn Stars" icon Rick Harrison, magician duo Murray and Dani SawChuck, a Halloween bash with MJ The Evolution, and a grand finale tap with "America's Got Talent" finalists The Clairvoyants on Saturday, November 1.

Beyond the keg taps, expect a packed slate of merriment: daily specials, stein-holding showdowns, live entertainment, bar games, prizes, and plenty of dancing in the aisles. The kitchen turns out Bavarian comfort classics—think schnitzel, sausages, and sauerbraten—designed to pair perfectly with a towering stein.

Oktoberfest at Hofbräuhaus is a hot ticket, and reservations are strongly encouraged.

Twenty-one years in, Hofbräuhaus Las Vegas continues to bring Bavaria to the desert with unmatched authenticity and a contagious sense of fun. Thanks to Commissioner Tick Segerblom's ceremonial first tap, the 2025 season is officially underway—so grab your friends, raise your steins, and say it with us: Prost!

The Nuns Are Back in Town: Sin Sity Sisters' 20th

Two decades ago, a small band of glitter-armored do-gooders put on whiteface, veils, and tenacious smiles and stepped into Las Vegas nightlife with a beautifully simple idea: meet people where they are—with compassion, humor, safer-sex education, and practical help when life gets hard. From that spark, the Sin Sity Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence grew into one of Southern Nevada's most recognizable engines of joyful activism: part nun, part neon, all heart. This fall, the Sisters mark twenty years of service by doing something they've never done: hosting a Sisterhood Conclave in Las Vegas, October 8–12, 2025, and inviting the public into the celebration with Absolution. It's a party, yes, but also a declaration that radical welcome still matters in 2025 and that Las Vegas is a master class in how it's done.

A Worldwide Sisterhood Convenes

In the Sisterhood, Conclave is the family reunion you actually want to attend. Every few years, a host city welcomes Sisters from other houses—local chapters with their own traditions and programs—for a long weekend of connection, learning, and service. Workshops, rituals, community visits, and late-night laughter fuel an exchange of ideas: what's working in your city, how might it translate here, and which emerging needs demand nimble, creative response. Hosting during their twentieth anniversary lets the Sin Sity Sisters honor a house built on volunteer power and partnership while showing visiting Sisters the Las Vegas that locals know: a web of grassroots organizations, resource centers, queer bars, drag stages, and clinics that keep people alive and connected beneath the Strip's spectacular veneer.

Expect a joyful, high-visibility presence all week. Las Vegas is used to seeing a handful of white-faced nuns at a time; Conclave aims to multiply that presence with a full gaggle ministering in the wild the way only Sisters can—handing out safer-sex kits, distributing Narcan and fentanyl test strips, blessing, hugging, listening, joking, fundraising, and being present in the places where presence matters. Registrations always spike close to arrival—Sisters do love a fashionable deadline—and some European houses are expected as well. If you encounter a mobile photo shoot downtown, a sudden chorus of laughter in Commercial Center, or an impromptu sidewalk confessional, you've likely wandered into Conclave at its best: a feast of care, camp, and community.

To understand why this moment resonates, look at how the Las Vegas order has changed—and stayed the same—over twenty years. Born on the streets of San Francisco, the first Sisters of Perpetual Indulgence sashayed forth to “promulgate universal joy and expiate stigmatic guilt” over 40 years ago. With habits, whiteface, wit, and weaponized compassion, they skewered bigotry and complacency while serving up activism, charity, and saucy public education—trailblazing the 1982 Play Fair! safer-sex guide—proving that radical love can save lives, lift spirits, and look fabulous doing it.

When the Sin Sity Sisters formed in 2005, they adapted that ethos to the desert. In their first years, PEP was scarcely accessible and PrEP had yet to become a cornerstone of prevention. Today, the Sin Sity Sisters help navigate both, link trans and nonbinary community members to affirming care, guide people through pharmacy programs, and show up—without judgment—where help is needed most. Over time, they have directed more than a million dollars in assistance to keep people in care and on medication, all raised locally without government funding and without paid staff. The facts matter: the order is entirely volunteer-run, its reputation built on follow-through, and every dollar placed into a sister's hands is a dollar someone in this community entrusted because the mission delivers.

As the overdose crisis touched nightlife and friend circles across the valley, harm reduction became a pillar of ministry. Narcan and fentanyl and xylazine test strips now mingle with safer-sex kits at club nights and street fairs. In a little over a year, hundreds of kits have landed quietly in the right hands at the right times. The stories are sobering and hopeful: a late-night whisper that a kit saved a friend, a calm explanation that helped someone ask the pharmacist the right question, a conversation outside a bar that nudged a neighbor back into care. These are not moments built for social media; they're the slow, sturdy work of a house committed to being in the right places with the right tools and the right tone.

Ask members why they joined and the answers circle the same constellation: acceptance, purpose, the chance to erase stigma and multiply what one person can do by acting together. Ask why they stay and the replies are just as consistent: because the mission works—on the community and on the soul. Internally, the house has grown more diverse in age, gender, and expression. The Sisters welcome Sisters and Guards, make room for crossover, and embrace personal evolution. Some personas lean high-femme glamour; others favor androgyny or industrial chic; all share the intention to meet people where they are and leave them a little safer, a little happier, a little more seen.

Confess, Play, Repeat

Absolution, the public jewel of the week, distills that intention with a wink. The Sisters' famous benediction—“go forth and sin some more”—is part comedy and part theology, a reminder that in this lexicon, sin is not about shame; it's about play, pleasure, consent, and community. Absolution is not permission to harm; it is permission to live fully, shrug off stigma, and meet each other with compassion. The timing is more than symbolic. National Coming Out Day is a yearly reminder that visibility and safety are intertwined and that stepping into the light can still change lives. Absolution marries celebration and curriculum. First-timers will see skilled demonstrations, ask questions, and learn the etiquette of kink. Veterans will reconnect and share best practices. Curious allies can show up respectfully and discover why consent culture benefits everyone, not only people who like their nightlife with a little rope and rhythm.

Anniversary Conclave Culminates with Absolution

The nuts and bolts are inviting. Absolution runs Saturday, October 11, from 6 to 11 p.m. at The Usual Place, with an indoor-outdoor footprint that adds room for music, socializing, and a market of local vendors. Two DJs will keep energy moving in different areas; food options will be on hand; and throughout the night, a curated slate of demos—from flogging and wax play to shibari and suspension—will be led by experienced practitioners who prioritize safety and consent. Because part of the event is outdoors in a public-facing setting, attire must be public-friendly. Think of it as an undress code within the law: creativity encouraged, nudity not permitted. Inside or outside, the most important accessory is consent, and the sharpest look is a clear boundary politely observed.

Leaning into kink this year is both pragmatic and poetic. The kink community is a longstanding part of queer life and, in Las Vegas, crosses boundaries with ease. The Sisters already anchor major events such as Red Dress, a performance-driven HIV benefit, and Project Nunway, a runway and design showcase for charity. Absolution adds a third lane: a night that centers education and consent while bridging leather families, pups, kink veterans, kink-curious newcomers, and respectful straight allies. In a year when culture-war rhetoric has been loud about bodies and identities, an evening that calmly models how consent is asked, given, and withdrawn becomes more than a party. It becomes public pedagogy with a throbby beat.

Conclave itself is a living classroom. Each order tailors its work to local needs. Some prioritize food security, others focus on trans access to care, still others specialize in outreach to people living with HIV or queer youth navigating hostile homes. By presenting programs—what raises funds, what builds trust, what actually reaches people—Sisters cross-pollinate strategy. A clever raffle mechanic migrates across state lines. A pharmacy partnership adapts to new regulations. An idea for a pop-up clinic becomes a Saturday ritual. The effect is ecological: stronger houses make for a stronger network, and stronger networks weather storms. Visitors will also see the Las Vegas locals recognize, a dense web of mutual aid, nonprofits, queer-owned businesses, and clinics that hold people together behind the marquee lights.

No twentieth anniversary would be complete without gratitude, and the Sisters have a specific thank-you. Photographer Shane O'Neil has helped the house become legible to the wider public, creating an archive of images that are luminous and true. In a town that manufactures glamour by the gigawatt, his portraits capture soul—crisp lines, playful reverence, humor without mockery. The work made the Sisters visible to people who might never otherwise have met them, dignified the mission without sanding off its irreverence, and told a simple truth: Las Vegas is camp and care, and the Sisters are fluent in both. The house says it plainly: thank you, Shane. Your eye helped this city see them, your craft helped partners take them seriously, and your generosity helped donors understand why it mattered that these nuns in whiteface kept showing up.

Rapid, Community-Funded Aid to Keep HIV Treatment on Track

The reality under the rhinestones is that this work is daily and demanding. From the outside, the Sisters can look like pure spectacle, but glamour is the wrapper and work is the candy. There is no staff, no government grant, no deep endowment—just spreadsheets, vendor calls, permits, budgets, volunteer schedules, safety briefings, and a constant calculus of what to say yes to now so the house can say yes again next month. Every event is a logistical puzzle; every request is weighed against tomorrow's needs. Trust is the bedrock. Donors return because receipts match promises. Partners answer emails because years of experience say a Sister who pledges two boxes of kits and a bright smile at 5:30 will arrive at 5:25. They know those safer-sex packets disappear quickly and the people who take them are grateful. Politics do not stop at the door. The house doesn't depend on federal dollars, which insulates against some shocks, but policy changes still ripple outward. When safety nets fray, the need rises. When rhetoric demonizes queer and trans people or restricts gender-affirming care, neighbors feel less safe seeking help. When threats to charitable status chill nonprofit speech, advocacy becomes a tighter wire to walk. The Sin City Sisters have stayed clear about their north star: keep people safe; speak up about policy impacts without jeopardizing the 501(c)(3) work; and do it with humor, compassion, and a touch of theatricality. That steadiness is part of why the house is still here twenty years on. The issues they fight remain; the tools—joy, presence, solidarity—still work.

Anniversaries invite accounting. Numbers never tell the whole story, but they help: twenty years of continuous service; over one million dollars in direct assistance raised entirely from the community; thousands of safer-sex kits placed in the right hands; hundreds of harm-reduction kits distributed in a little over a year; zero paid staff.

The next twenty years will require the same blend of care and camp, the same willingness to build coalitions and move nimbly as needs evolve, the same faith that Las Vegas—glorious, surprising, stubbornly kind—will keep showing up when asked. Expect the house to deepen leadership pathways, mentor novitiates, and make room for members to express themselves authentically. Expect more collaboration with nightlife, clinics, mutual-aid networks, schools, libraries, parade organizers, and any partner willing to say, "Let's help people where they are." Mark your calendar. Dust off the boots, polish the harness, press the party dress, or come exactly as you are. And after the final blessing, we'll all do what the Sisters have invited us to do since day one: go forth—and sin some more.

VEGAS Arrivals

Two Editions. One Community.

Born in our bars and theaters, raised by our nonprofits and night crews, QVegas is the hometown publication for Las Vegas' LGBTQ+ community. We celebrate neighborhood legends, new stages, and the everyday wins that make this city feel like home.

Beginning in October, QVegas will move to a bi-weekly production schedule: the same great stories, the same distribution, and even more local flair, now with a two-week shelf life for each issue.

Landing at Harry Reid's baggage claim and select city spots, QVegas Arrivals is your first friendly guide to LGBTQ+ Las Vegas—shows, dining, nightlife, and community picks curated by the people who live here.

QVegas Arrivals is a tourism-forward publication debuting at Harry Reid International Airport (Terminal 1 baggage claim information kiosks) and select locations across the city. Both editions will be available online, on social media, via email, and in the QVegas iOS and Vision Pro apps.
