The Wonderful World of Was

Windmill Library Theater recently showcased a stirring theatrical representation of a global issue many face yet few discuss openly – dementia. As part of the Lewy Body Dementia Medical Awareness Month, the Social Issues Theatre graced the stage with "The Wonderful World of Was", an enlightening musical dramedy that dwells deep into the lives of those affected by dementia, both directly and indirectly.

Penned by renowned playwrights L.A. Walker, who also serves as the executive director of Social Issues Theatre, and Marcia Norris, the play provides an emotional labyrinth that is painfully relatable for many. Dementia's pervasive reach impacts not just those diagnosed but also cascades into the lives of family, friends, and caregivers, many of whom are thrust into caregiving roles without prior experience.

The story unfolds around the demise of Lorraine Bordeaux, and how her husband, showing early signs of dementia, finds himself under the care of diverse characters – their entitled daughter, a compassionate friend, and a maintenance man named Tony. The tale shines a light on the real-world unpreparedness and emotional tumult many undergo when caring for a dementia patient.

The talented ensemble, comprising Anthony Brady, Niya Rivera, Washeta Gaither, Tyler Rhea, David Dendy, Garrett Pattiani, and Anthony Vann (as the understudy), does an impeccable job in capturing the audience's heart. Each cast member, some with personal connections to the ailment, lent authenticity and depth to the characters.

Notably, David Dendy, with over three decades of ordination at the Mountain View Presbyterian Church, sees his involvement as a means of community outreach, having personally counseled many families facing similar situations.

Similarly, Garrett Pattiani's participation stems from a personal connection with L.A. Walker and an earnest desire to spread awareness. As for Anthony Brady, his portrayal of Mr. Bordeaux becomes even more poignant when we discover that he's personally witnessed dementia's effects in families.

A special mention goes to the musical brilliance woven throughout the play. With original scores by L.A. Walker, coupled with Marcia Norris and Musical Director Elder Demieceo Benson's touch, the auditory experience was nothing short of mesmerizing. The Las Vegas Mass Choir, led by Director and Founder James R. Smith, added a rich tapestry of sounds that complemented the play's profound message.

"The Wonderful World of Was" is more than just a play. It's a testament to the human spirit, the trials of the present, and the fading echoes of the past. By the play's end, it's clear: while dementia might steal memories, it can't strip away love, resilience, or the power of the present moment.

It's commendable that organizations like Social Issues Theatre are leveraging the arts to raise awareness and foster understanding on pressing societal issues. With productions like these, theater does what it does best – tells stories that matter and resonates deeply with human experiences.

A second performance will be held on Friday, November 10 at 7pm at the Clark County Flamingo Library. This is a free event.

DeSantis' Controversial Takeover of Disney District Leads to Leadership Exodus and Chaos

In a move that has sent shockwaves through Central Florida's tourism industry, over thirty employees have departed from the Central Florida Tourism Oversight District (CFTOD), the governing body responsible for Walt Disney World. This drastic upheaval includes the resignation of almost half of its senior leadership. This exodus has been largely attributed to the controversial intervention by Florida Governor Ron DeSantis, causing apprehensions about the district's operational stability and potential political interventions.

CFTOD, previously recognized as the Reedy Creek Improvement District, is witnessing exits at every administrative layer. This spans from the district administrator and chief financial officer to key roles in public works, procurement, and facilities management.

This disruption's origins can be traced back to DeSantis' bold decision to exert direct control over the district. Many interpret this as a retaliatory action against Disney, especially following Disney's public critique of an anti-LGBTQ+ bill labeled "Don't Say Gay" and their subsequent cessation of campaign donations, which seemed to have provoked DeSantis. Rapid legislative changes under DeSantis allowed him to handpick the board of supervisors, placing his loyalists and allies in pivotal roles, who, in turn, removed long-standing executives.

Further stirring the pot, the newly minted CFTOD board initiated legal proceedings against Disney in a state court in May 2023. This was subsequent to Disney's federal lawsuit against both the board members of CFTOD and Governor DeSantis. Disney's lawsuit vehemently argues that DeSantis orchestrated a governmental retaliatory campaign, endangering Disney's operations and infringing on their constitutional rights, all as reprisal for Disney's protected speech.

A manager with three decades under his belt at Reedy Creek lamented the new management's distrustful approach, deeming it demoralizing. Another manager described the transition as overwhelmingly negative, while a department director bemoaned the new leadership as lacking qualifications. These sentiments culminated in an executive assistant's claims that the once-special district's legacy was being eroded by the new leadership.

The internal morale of the district appears to be in free fall. Descriptions of the current work environment range from toxic and demoralizing to highly stressful. This isn't just an issue of employee dissatisfaction; the overarching concern is the district's future competence in managing critical services for Walt Disney World Resort, given the prevalent sentiments of distrust and perceived incompetence.

On the operational front, the district is facing significant challenges. With a plethora of job vacancies, especially in facilities management, concerns mount over the district's capacity to maintain essential services, such as fire protection and building inspections. These operational hitches might have tangible repercussions on Walt Disney World's day-to-day activities.

In its earlier incarnation as the Reedy Creek Improvement District, it was renowned for its efficiency, even if some criticized its unique standing and Disney's palpable influence. Its transformation into CFTOD under DeSantis signifies a departure from an efficiently run administrative entity to a politically charged battleground.

Orlando Set to Acquire Pulse Nightclub for Future Memorial

In a recent announcement, Orlando's Mayor Buddy Dyer shared that the city is on the brink of acquiring Pulse nightclub. This venue sadly holds the memory of one of the most devastating mass shootings in U.S. history.

The proposed purchase of $2 million, set to be discussed and potentially approved by city commissioners on Monday, will pave the way for a memorial at the site. This tragic incident in 2016 led to the loss of 49 lives and left numerous others injured. If given the green light by the city council, the purchase will be finalized by Oct. 27, shared Dyer.

Seven years have passed since the incident, and the establishment of a memorial at the nightclub's site has seen delays. "The most suitable place for a memorial is right here, and we believe we're in a unique position to help see it through," Mayor Dyer commented. "Our objective is to ensure everyone that a tribute will indeed be constructed here."

For many who survived the incident, families of the victims, and those who mourn the loss, the former LGBTQ nightclub has turned into sacred ground. Memories of the event are alive through a 150-yard photo wall showcasing artworks and pictures from vigils.

Details about the future of the existing building and the design of the memorial remain undecided, with Mayor Dyer emphasizing that the current priority is to secure the site. "Decisions regarding the next steps post-acquisition are still pending," he added.

The purchase price of $2 million is slightly above the appraised value of $1.9 million, as mentioned by city representatives.

Interestingly, a previous attempt to acquire the club by the city in 2016 was unsuccessful. They had proposed a purchase price of $2.25 million just a few months after the tragedy. However, before the deal could be approved by the council, the Pomas opted out.

Over the years, plans to commemorate the victims with a lasting tribute have seen various changes. An initial plan put forth by onePulse in 2019 envisioned a reflecting pool surrounded by 49 trees and a museum in the vicinity. Yet, financial constraints, given the ambitious $100 million estimated cost, led the foundation to reconsider. More recent plans see a "survivors walk" being built, connecting the club to the Orlando Regional Medical Center, where the victims received treatment. Another proposed idea includes repurposing a warehouse to serve as a museum.

Get ready, Las Vegas, because the fabulous Bravo Con is about to hit the strip, and this year, it's all about celebrating the rainbow magic that the Bravo franchise brings to our screens. With a huge LGBTQ+ following, Bravo has been our go-to for fierce representation, showcasing some of our beloved LGBTQ+ icons like the incredible Andy Cohen, the trailblazing Julia Lemigova, the fabulous Capt. Sandy Yawn, the stylish Jenna Lyons, and the charming Amrit Kapai. We can't forget that Julia made history as the first LGBTQ+ Housewife to sashay onto the Bravo scene, paving the way for more of our fierce fam to join the party.

Cue the glitter cannons, because one unexpected Bravo-lebrity is stepping into the spotlight, waving their rainbow flag high and proud. You guessed it—Alexis Bellino, the queen known for her devotion to her Christian faith, is making waves with a dazzling display of love and support for our community. She's showing us that there's room for everyone under the rainbow, regardless of where you come from or who you love.

Alexis was in town to support local women at Dress for Success Southern Nevada's 11th Annual Diamond Dig at T-Mobile Arena on Thursday, Oct. 27. "I truly believe that empowering women is the cornerstone of building a better future for all of us. This event serves as a way for us to come together and help make a positive impact in the lives of these women," Alexis said.

During the same trip to Las Vegas, this glam goddess not only showed her charitable side but also used her platform to amplify the message of love and equality by attending the grand opening of the iconic Gipsy Nightclub.

Serving looks for days, Alexis took to Instagram to spread the love, proclaiming, 'I stand for love and equality. Underneath, we all have the same heart that beats the same way no matter what shape, size, race, sexual preference, etc. And we ALL deserve to be happy. Thank you @piranhavegas @gipsylasvegas for having me. I am grateful my life brought me into the LGBTQ community because our world today has too much hate and needs to focus on unconditional love and not judging. Let God be our judge. A kind heart goes a long way. FYI.. there was SO much talent in that room. Dancers beyond. I love each of you that I met last weekend!!! Can't wait to see you soon. #lgbtq #love #kindness #equality #dancing #godloveseveryone. My new bestie @larryedwardslv

And hold onto your feather boas, folks, because the cherry on top was her newfound friendship with the fabulous Larry Edwards, a shining star from the LGBTQ+ community. Their bonding session at Gipsy Nightclub gave us all the warm fuzzies and reminded us that love knows no boundaries.

As we gear up for the fierce extravaganza that is BravoCon, it's no surprise that other Bravo cast members are catching wind of the fabulousness that went down at Gipsy. Rumor has it that there's an unofficial gathering planned at the nightclub during the convention, and we're already prepping our fiercest outfits for the occasion.

Check out the dazzling BravoCon schedule featured in the article and prepare to paint the town rainbow! Let's take a moment to raise a glass to the Bravo Universe for always championing inclusivity and visibility. When our LGBTQ+ fam stands up and spreads the love, it's a reminder that our community is stronger and more vibrant than ever. Here's to celebrating diversity, unity, and, of course, all the sparkle!

BravoCon 2023, which is being held at Caesars Forum in Las Vegas, will bring together more than 165 reality television stars to dish about the biggest moments from their seasons and reveal some off-camera secrets. Over 60 events are scheduled for the three-day convention.

BravoCon 2023, which is being held at Caesars Forum in Las Vegas, will bring together more than 165 reality television stars to dish about the biggest moments from their seasons and reveal some off-camera secrets. Over 60 events are scheduled for the three-day conference.
